ATTACK STORY OF PRISONER

Where did "Kid Carter" get the $25 he had in his pockets when arrested?

That is the question which is puzzling the police in their investigation of the connection of the young pugilist with the mysterious death of Mrs. Mildred Donovan.

The authorities believe "Kid Carter," whose name is James B. Jennings, and who was the last man seen with Mildred Donovan, procured money and a disguise for the purpose of slipping out of Boston Wednesday night. That was before he shot James H. McPherson in a South End saloon and was arrested.

Jennings changed his clothing Tuesday evening, when he was in the company of Mildred Donovan, bought a raincoat, which he was careful to have look as though it had been used; discarded a good black stiff hat for a cap, and then bought the shine of the South End, where it is believed liquor or drugs got the better of his senses and he shot McPherson and fell into the hands of the police.

What the Police Doubt.

Here are some statements made by Jennings that the police doubt:

That he left Mildred Donovan at 7 or 7:30 p. m., Tuesday evening in Almond square, Malden, and did not see her again that evening.

"Kid Carter" had been in the company of Mildred Donovan at her home in Revere calling; he leaned over and peered into the all day Monday, remained all night and continued Tuesday evening. If is claimed he knew. But he found no one. Probably it is unlikely that he would have left her alone in Malden simply because she did not go to his home and return to him in three-quarters of an hour. It would have been more natural for him, in his penniless condition, to have followed the woman, who had gone to his home to get him money, and found her.

That "Kid Carter" left the home of a relative on Wednesday at 9 a. m. with fifteen cents, and made more than $25 shooting craps within two hours with his "shoestring stake."

Where Did He Get Money?

The police know that the young pugilist had the money by 11 o'clock because he bought a raincoat and a suit of fine blue and had a roll of bills left. He paid $3.50 for the coat and can so he must have had between $25 and $30 early Wednesday, when it is known he had no money Tuesday evening and did not get any at his mother's home in Everett, where Mildred

CHARLES F. PIDGIN ASKS $1,000 PENSION

Charles Felton Pidgin, the well-known writer, author of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and numerous other books and plays, wants a pension from the State of Massachusetts of $1,000 a year. Mr. Pidgin's claim is based on long service to the State. It was presented by Senator Biggs of Boston to the Legislature today. Mr. Pidgin was for thirty years chief clerk of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor and chief of that bureau for four years.

BURGLARS FOILED AT BLACKSTONE P. O.

Ever since the postoffice at Blackstone was robbed of $900 last May the postmaster has used the safe for most anything except to protect money. He takes the cash home nights. He telephoned the postoffice inspectors' office at Boston today that burglars entered his office in the night and blew open the safe, but that they secured nothing of value. He thinks it was a return visit of the gang which last May blew open his safe and secured the $900.

NEW BILL PUTS BAN ON RED FLAG PARADE

Public school, retail coal and red flag bills were filed at the State House today by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Boston One bill provides for regulation of the sale of coal at retail. Another provides that the Boston School Board shall consist of twenty-six members, one from each ward. The third would prohibit the display of red flags in parades or meetings.

James B. Jennings, known as "Kid Carter," today was arraigned in the Municipal Court charged with murder. Jennings shot William H. McPherson in a South End saloon on Wednesday. McPherson died yesterday afternoon.

Jennings had been held in $25,000 bail in connection with the shooting. He is locked up in the Charles Street Jail. His only concern when arraigned was about the money the police had found in his pockets when he was arrested.

"Murder" Now the Charge.

Assistant Clerk Loyd read the charge against Jennings. It had been changed from "assault with intent to kill" to "willful murder." The prisoner manifested no interest. When the clerk asked him to plead to the charge, he replied in a tone of disgust.

"Not guilty."

Detective Sergeant Irwin asked the court to adjourn the case until Monday without bail. Judge Burns did as requested. Jennings straightened up and addressed the judge.

"Well, say," he exclaimed, "Your Honor, they've got $26.33 belonging to me and I want it for my expenses down in the jail."

"They'll have to attend to that at the jail," replied the judge.

Once when Jennings was standing at the bar of the court he leaned over and peered into the face of Detective Sergeant Irwin, as though searching for a face that he knew. But he found no one. Probably it is unlikely that he would have left her alone in Malden simply because she did not go to his home and return to him in three-quarters of an hour. It would have been more natural for him, in his penniless condition, to have followed the woman, who had gone to his home to get him money, and found her.

Not a Friend in Court.

No relative and no friend made himself known if he was there. "Kid Carter" finds himself facing a murder charge without a lawyer, so far, and without a friend appearing since his arrest. His whole demeanor in court was that of a man who didn't care what happened.

When he pleaded not guilty he said it in the tough potes of the slum rounder. The scowl with which he has been credited had not been affected by two nights in prison.

Jennings was taken from the Charles Street Jail to the courthouse in a cab. He was handcuffed to Court Officer Wilson. When he reached the prison pen in the courtroom Wilson was joined by Court Officers Twombley and McCarter. The three officers Twombley and McCarter. The three him all the time he was in court.

The care taken to guard the man indicated that the court officers did not propose to take any chance of an outbreak on the part of the prisoner.

When the time came for "Kid Carter" to be returned to his cell, he again peered into the crowd—searching for a friend. But he one known friend of his—Mildred Donovan of Revere—is dead in a tragedy whose mystery extends its shadow over the young fighter.

TAFT DECIDES NOT TO NAME GOETHALS PANAMA GOVERNOR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Following a conference with Senator Brandegee of Connecticut, chairman of the Senate committee on inter-oceanic canals, President Taft today announced he would not attempt to institute civil government in the Canal zone, and that he would not nominate Colonel George W. Goethals to be Governor of the zone.

WHISKEY IN MAIL, POSTAL PROBLEM

The receipt of a quart bottle filled with whiskey, by parcel post from Boston to Lynn, today placed Postmaster Craig of that city in a peculiar position. He can't find the bottle to the dead-letter office, whiskey through the mails being tabooed by the government. The department regulations also prohibit the delivery of the bottle to the person to who mit was sent. Still other regulations forbid either the destruction of mailed matter or the keeping of liquors at a postoffice.

ACTRESS QUITE SURE HUSBAND IS PASTOR'S SON

The former Miss Emma McLaughlin of Boston, who is known on the stage as Trixie Clarendon, and who was married in Bridgeport on Wednesday night, is trying to find out, according to dispatches from New York, just who her husband is.

The bride, who is twenty-one, and the daughter of Hugh and Emma McLaughlin of this city, says that the young man she married is Archie Babcock of Paterson, N. J., the son of a clergyman.

Investigation in Paterson reveals that there is only one Archie Babcock there, and that he is the son of a silk manufacturer and his a wife there. This Babcock married a daughter of August Thomsen of No. 29 North Tenth street, Paterson, June 30 last. Two weeks afterward he was accused of having deserted his bride. She has been looking for him since and has preferred charges against him.

His mother said she had not heard of Archie since he left his bride and does not know where he is.

The Archie Babcock, Jr., about five years ago was a soldier in the United States Army, stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt. He was accused of desertion and was confined on Governors Island.

In October, 1905, a boy who said he was Archie Babcock, Jr., of Paterson, was arrested in Hackensack, suspected of being a highwayman.

The police of Hoboken also have a warrant for the arrest of Archie Babcock, Jr., charging him with having broken into the home of his cousin, Mrs. C. B. Ferguson, No. 1110 Park avenue, Hoboken, and stealing articles worth $125.

Wedemeyer, Insane Congressman, Ends Life by Leap in Sea

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Word reached the War Department today of the death by drowning of William W. Wedemeyer, Congressman from Ann Arbor, Mich.

He is supposed to have leaped from the government steamer Panama while on his way back to the United States from the Isthmus.

The Michigan representative reached the Canal Zone the day President Taft started back to Washington, and his friends made an attempt to have him placed in irons on the Delaware and returned to the United States because of a previous attempt at suicide, due to mental derangement. Colonel Goethals, however, decided it was better to place him in the Government Hospital at Ancon, from which it is understood he was released Wednesday, and started back to the United States. He eluded his nurses almost before the steamer was out of Panama harbor and leaped overboard. The body probably was carried away by sharks.

PICKPOCKETS TAKEN; CHILDREN TRAMPLED

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Men, women and children were knocked down and trampled today in a fight between two city detectives and two men they were trying to arrest in a crowded Lexington avenue car. After a 20-minute struggle the detectives gained the upper hand and the men were locked up, charged with being pickpockets. The police say Jacob Levine, one of them, is wanted for grand larceny in Massachusetts.

MAYNARD, LOMASNEY, NEAR FIGHT

Political leaders discussed with the keenest interest today the bitter row in the Democratic State Committee which almost developed into a fist fight between ex-Senator Joseph F. Lomasney of Ward 8 and President Joseph A. Maynard of the Boston Democratic City Committee. The session was the hottest in the committee's history, the first news of the row leaked out this afternoon.

President Maynard, resenting a rednot attack made on him by ex-Senator Lomasney, peeled off his coat. He made a spring for the brother of Representative Martin J. Lomasney. Only by the quick interference of Mayor Fitzgerald was peace brought about. The Mayor pleaded with Maynard to desist.

Lomasney Criticised Maynard.

The meeting was the most exciting in the history of the Democratic State Committee. The row came after ex-Senator Lomasney for ten minutes had assailed Maynard, saying the latter neither knew anything about politics, nor could he be considered a political leader or even a political factor. After the meeting Mayor Fitzgerald was congratulated for his successful effort in preventing a battle.

Political leaders today, who knew the inside of the call, declared its cause lay in differences existing between Lomasney and Maynard over the naming of the successor to Chairman Samuel H. Hudson on the Boston Excise Board. It is said that Lomasney favors Daniel J. Kiley, while Maynard has been himself put forward for the office. It was understood that the Mayor favored Maynard for the appointment, which is to be made by Governor Foss.

The "Boston Coterie."

The quarrel in the committee meeting was the outcome of a charge made by Dr. T. P. Sullivan of Fall River that the rules had been so arranged that the members of the committee had in reality become figureheads and that a coterie of Boston members of Ward 8 had become the "whole thing." Dr. Sullivan accused Chairman Hiley of the committee of "arrogantly assuming powers that belonged to the committee. Dr. Sullivan made a motion for the appointment of a committee of five to draw rules which "will clip the wings" of the "Boston coterie."

Members of the committee said this afternoon that it would be safe to that there will be no further trouble in the organization. Dr. Sullivan won out at the meeting by having his motion for new rules adopted. A new committee is to draft these rules.

DEMOCRATS ARE TO CONFER ON SENATORSHIP

A conference of the Democratic members of the Legislature to decide what to do with the party should take on the United States Senatorship, will probably be held early next week. Leading Democratic legislators headed by Representative John F. Hennessy of Roxbury today started the movement for a conference. It was explained that the conference would not in any way be binding and that it simply would give an opportunity for members to express opinions as to how the party should proceed in the contest.

Governor Foss and other leading Democrats believe that in the event of failure to secure the passage of a special senatorial primary act, the Democratic members should make every attempt to unite with the Bull Moose and Independent Republican legislators to prevent the election of a standpatter to Senator Crane's place.

The Republican legislators will hold a conference on the senatorship on Monday afternoon.

JAMES ASKS DELAY IN MYLIUS CASE

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Edward Holton James, editor of the Liberator, and a nephew of the late William James of Harvard, today cabled to the United States State Department asking that the deportation of Edouard Mylius be delayed until Holton James can arrive in the United States to defend him. It was in the Liberator that the libel on King George was printed for which Mylius was not allowed to enter the United States.

FEAR FOR WARSHIPS AS BIG FLOOD SWEEPS OVER VIRGINIA CITY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Secretary of the Navy Myer today received an unofficial report from Norfolk, Va., that a tidal wave has swept a portion of that city, destroying much shipping. The water is reported to have reached the second-story windows of some houses.

The department was unable to communicate either by telegraph or wireless with ships of the Atlantic fleet in Hampton Roads, and great anxiety is felt here for their safety.

The big government wireless station at Arlington, Va., has been instructed to keep after all government ships and to report immediately if it hears from any of them.

It is feared that shipping all along the coast has suffered severely from the tremendous windstorm that swept the coast today.

JEKYL ISLAND SEARCH FOR ROCKEFELLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Despite the sudden to the effect that Whitney Rockefeller sailed from Jekyl Island last Tuesday for Bermuda, Sergeant-at-Arms C. F. Riddell of the House of Representatives today allowed no relaxation of the vigil of the various Rockefeller residences that have been under the eyes of scores of his men for nearly a week past, and declared he believed that the millionaire oil magnate was in his fifth avenue home.

The sergeant-at-arms received orders from the Pujo committee investigating the money trust not to return to Washington without the witness, and the official is emphatic in saying he will get his man. When asked today if he had heard anything from Washington about a warrant for Rockefeller, he replied:

"I cannot tell you anything about that."

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria at Point of Death

ROME, Jan. 3.—The Pope, who has always maintained the closest relations with the Austrian royal family, today was informed by messages from the court at Vienna that Emperor Francis Joseph's condition was most grave, and that his death probably would be a matter of hours.

Pope Pius sent his apostolic benediction to Vienna in anticipation of the death of the Emperor, in a message to Cardinal Nagl, papal nuncio at the Austria-Hungarian court, with instructions to withhold it until it became certain that the aged ruler of the dual monarchy was dying.

REID'S BODY ARRIVES WITH NAVAL ESCORT

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The British cruiser Natal, bearing the body of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid and accompanied by an escort of two American battleships and four destroyers, arrived today, and as soon as it was possible to move through the fog proceeded up the North River to Ninety-fifth street, where the fleet dropped anchor.

The Natal accompanied by the United States battleships Florida, with Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske aboard, the North Dakota, and the destroyers Paulding, Dayton, McCall and Rose, reached the lower bay at noon and there dropped anchor for a time because of the fog.

The Natal carried the Union Jack at half mast and the American ensign at the main truck in honor of the dead Ambassador.

Following the fleet's arrival off Ninety-fifth street, the body was removed to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at 110th street and Cathedral Parkway. The funeral will take place tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

The North Dakota had a narrow escape from crashing into the Oceanic in the fog off Quarantine. The Oceanic was anchored across the channel. The warship's bow was aimed straight for the Oceanic amidships. Only a prompt reversal of the engines averted what might have been a serious disaster.

When the Natal arrived off Ninety-fifth street she fired a salute of twenty-one guns and broke the Union Jack at her bow. The Florida replied.

The honorary list of bearers include James Bryce, British ambassador; Admiral Sir Hedworth Lamb, John Salwathder, secretary of State Knox, J. Pierpont Morgan, Chauncey M. Depew, Joseph H. Choate, former United States ambassador to London; Robert M. Lincoln, Donald McNicholson, Senators Root and Lodge, Robert Bacon, Henry White and Judge Gray.

'OTHER WOMAN' LAYS TRAGEDY TO MRS. EDEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Responsibility for the murder of Mrs. Henry C. Edey by her husband, a retired millionaire broker, who subsequently committed suicide in their Bellport, L. I., home, today was placed on the dead woman by Mrs. Gardner Murdock, the "other woman" in the strange marital tangle involving the Edey family and the Murdocks.

According to Mrs. Murdock, whose husband recently sued Edey for alienation of Mrs. Murdock's affections, Mrs. Edey publicly paid attentions to Murdock, who at that time, was a prosperous Bellport flyeryman.

"Mrs. Edey was the cause of all this trouble," declared Mrs. Murdock today. "She pursued my husband and tried in every way to break up my home. She went so far as to persuade her husband to give Mr. Murdock money so he could take her to Texas. Then it was planned that Edey was to sue his wife for divorce and lawyers were hired to bring divorce proceedings in my behalf. All this was done so that Mrs. Edey would be free to marry my husband. I never had any love for Mr. Edey and never would have married him."

NEAR AGREEMENT ON IMMIGRATION BILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The House and Senate conferees on the immigration bill got down to work today and it was predicted that they would reach an agreement in a few days which would be accepted by both houses and enable the President to affix his signature to the measure so that vigorous restriction of immigration will begin before March 1. The bill goes into effect, according to its provisions, within thirty days after its passage. It is estimated that it will shut out as high as 250,000 illiterate immigrants a year.

Pansies Blooming Jan. 3; but 'Beware!' Warns Weather Man

PITTSBURG, 11:50 A. M.—It is snowing here and the wind is high. The temperature is 28 against 41 at 8:30 o'clock.

Today brought the answer to Brother Lowell's famous query: "What is so rare as a day in June?" The answer is "Today in January."

If green grass on Boston Common, pansies blooming outdoors and a temperature of fifty-eight degrees are any signs, then today was early Summer.

There wasn't anything about that went with January 3—except possibly the rain. And even the rain was warm.

It was the warmest January 3 in years. Last year the Boston mercury climbed to 55 and people—don't you remember—said, "Gee, but it's hot."

But the temperature was three degrees better than that this noon, and likely to go to 60.

However—

The Weather Man, weary of being jested, defiantly produced the following local forecast today:

"Rain and colder tonight. Saturday fair and colder. High westerly winds."

COL. O. G. BARRON, NEW HAMPSHIRE HOTEL MAN, DIES

LITTLETON, N. H., Jan. 3.—Colonel Oscar G. Barron, one of the pioneers in the White Mountain hotel business, and a member of the well-known firm of Barron, Merrill & Barron, is dead at the Littleton Hospital. Death was due to diabetes and hardening of the arteries, from which he had suffered for the last five years. It had been expected that he would recover, until five days ago, when he began to grow worse.

Oscar G. Barron was a son of Asa Barron, a pioneer in the hotel business in the White Mountains, and was born at Queechee, Vt., October 17, 1850. His father ran the old Junction House at White River.

From that time, when he served as bell boy and night watchman, to the time of his last illness, he had been associated with hotels. His association with the White Mountain hotels began in 1869, when, as a lad of nineteen, he went to Twin Mountain, where his father, Asa Barron, built a cottage, which afforded accommodations to tourists, and which later became converted into the Twin Mountain House. For two years, Oscar was associated with C. H. Merrill, then owning the house, but in 1872 he became manager. In this same year his marriage to Miss Jennie Lane of Montpelier, Vt., took place. Afterward he ran the Fabyan House, also the Putnam House at Palatka, Fla., the Hotel Eastman at Hot Springs, Ark., and Hotel Fairchild at Seattle, Wash. For fifteen years he was in Washington, D. C., in charge of the Senate restaurant. He was elected Representative to the New Hampshire Legislature again and again.

SAYS WIFE WAS HYPNOTIZED BY REALTY DEALER

Samuel G. Stearns of Dorchester, whose comely young wife is missing from their home, while Christian H. Lyithans, a well-to-do Dorchester real estate man is likewise missing, is ill and unable to leave the house on account of his wife's disappearance.

Mr. Stearns has closed his house at No. 19 Marlowe street and is at his mother's house, No. 104 Howard avenue.

Mr. Stearns' mother said today that her son is unable to leave her home, but that he has not lost faith in his wife, and believes that she was hypnotized by Lythans.

"Muriel," said the mother-in-law, "has been suffering for several months with severe headaches. We all feel that she was simply a victim of Lythans's power and that she did not realize what she was doing."

Lythans is a married man. His wife found that, before leaving the city, he had deeded to her two houses and other property.

Mrs. Stearns also has property. Thus the two who have disappeared are the ones who had the property in each household.

Stearns, who is superintendent of loading of the Savannah Line, declared that from the time when his wife went to the real estate man to buy a home as a Christmas gift to her husband she had been under his spell.

Lythans is about forty. Mrs. Stearns is some years his junior and very attractive.

Mrs. Lythans was as much surprised about the sudden trend of affairs as was Mr. Stearns when he investigated and found his wife gone. Here is Mr. Stearns' story as told today:

Muriel had considerable property. We had been living in apartments, but it was her wish that we have a real home of our own. She had merely heard of Lythans as a large dealer in real estate, and her visit to him in search of a home has resulted in the wrecking of the home for which she sought to provide.

I believe that she went with the man on the spur of the moment. She had never talked of him to me or to any of her friends. I was dumfounded when I discovered she had left me. My work with the Savannah Line sometimes keeps me away from home for twenty-four hours at a time. I have learned that sometimes during my absence my wife would go out in Lythans' automobile.

I also learned that he provided for his wife's support before he left. If I were not a poor man I would certainly have him brought to justice; for I am certain he hypnotized Muriel.

ATTRIDGE WINS FIRST PLACE ON CITY BALLOT

Councilman John J. Attridge will have his name first upon the ballot at the municipal election on January 14, as a result of the drawing for places held by the Board of Election Commissioners today.

The two colleagues of Attridge, Lewis J. Hewitt of Brighton and Walter L. Collins who have been endorsed by the Citizens' Municipal League, will follow in that order upon the ballot. James A. (Jerry) Watson, the only independent candidate, received fourth, or last, place among the City Council candidates.

In the school committee contest the old adage of "ladies before gentlemen" was reversed in the drawing and Isaac Harris, the Democratic candidate for the board, will precede Miss Frances G. Curtis, the P. S. A. and Citizen Municipal League candidatee.

The drawing took less than five minutes and was conducted by Chairman John M. Minton. Commissioner Alphens Sunford drew the names from the circular ballot box after the slips had been well stirred.

Councilman Attridge and Lewis J. Hewitt were the only candidates present at the drawing. Councilman Collins was represented by his brother, Miss Curtis by Secretary Foss of the P. S. A., Isaac Harris by his publicity agent, and Watson by his campaign manager, Edward Madan.

ALLIES SET TIME LIMIT ON TURKS FOR PEACE TERMS

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Turkish delegates in the peace conference continued their policy of procrastination today and secured more delay. They made no material gain, however, as the Balkan and Greek envoys refused to grant the Turks longer than until 8 o'clock this evening.

The Turks made the plea that they were "awaiting final instructions from Constantinople," and asked that the conference go over until tomorrow. Reichad Pasha presented the argument for the Turks, but M. Daneff, the Bulgarian envoy, led in the protest against the continual delay.

Shortly after the Turks were granted a few hours time, dispatches received here from continental points stated that rumors were current on the European bourses that Adrianople had surrendered. The delegates were inclined to discredit the report.

It is an equally splendid chance to win one of the five $1,000 prizes, one of the five $600 prizes, one of the five $500 motor boats or any other one of the 1,400-odd awards.

The Contest Editor wishes, at this time, to caution all candidates about the necessity of clearly explaining the subscription plan when taking subscriptions. In several cases investigation has developed that subscribers have "refused to accept and pay for the paper," "don't want," "expects free papers at the beginning of subscription term," and so forth.

Candidates must understand that when the Contest Department reports to them that delivery is not being made on any subscriptions that one of three things must happen.

First—Candidate must see subscriber and arrange matters so that delivery can be properly made.

Second—Candidate must substitute a new name for subscription in any case where this cannot be done.

Third—In the event of candidates failing to do either of these things the vote credit will be deducted.

AUCTION SALE OF "SUICIDE'S" WORKS FAILURE

An attempt was made today to sell at auction the five fiction stories written by James R. Lambert, of No. 2 Norfolk court, Cambridge, who disappeared after writing a letter in which he said he planned to take his life because he had been unable to sell his manuscripts. In his letter Lambert announced the sale should be made at 10 o'clock this morning.

Only two bids were made, the higher for $10. The bidding was then called off. The missing man had written in his letter that no bid under $1,000 should be considered.

The stories went under the hammer in the office of Attorney Thomas A. Glennon, of No. 2501 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridgeport, who is a Cambridge alderman. Besides Lambert's brother John, the alderman's brother, M. J. Glennon, and a brother-in-law of Lambert, the only persons present were eight newspaper men, and Arthur F. Blanchard, candidate for Mayor of the Young Men's Progressive Municipal Party of Cambridge.

"Very Clever Scheme."

Attorney Glennon, asked if he believed the suicide letter was "straight," declared: "I believe it is a very clever scheme, and I will take no part of the responsibility for it, or for this sale, or anything connected with it."

Before the bidding started Attorney Glennon made a little speech. He said John Lambert had shown him the brother's letter.

"I suggested that he see the police," said the lawyer. "He said he didn't want to. I repeated my advice several times. The brother would not ask for an investigation, saying he didn't want to. He came to see me again yesterday to arrange for the auction today.

"I told Lambert that if there was any intent to defraud the public I didn't want to have anything to do with it."

The bidding then began. It was never brisk—it had hardly started before it stopped. It certainly wasn't encouraging to any literary aspirations the missing man may have had. Blanchard, who told the reporters he intended to advocate a minimum wage for all artists, playwrights and story writers if he is elected Mayor of Cambridge, started the bidding with an offer of $5. A newspaper man bid $10. There it ended.

Thinks Brother Is Dead.

John Lambert said he believed his brother was dead. He said he had offers aggregating $1,000 for the stories his brother left. He said the titles of the stories were "For the Undertaker's Benefit," "Casey's Marvelous Feat," "Why the Kid Quit," "How They Insured Hogan" and "Hard Luck." Lambert said he will open on January 10 a sealed envelope left by his brother at the Cambridge Trust Company.

No trace of the missing man has been found. The Cambridge police today said he had a record at police headquarters. He was arrested October 27, 1903, on suspicion and discharged, on December 10, 1904, on a charge of larceny for the Boston police, and on August 18, 1907, on a charge of disturbing the peace, for which he was fined $2.

LABOR IS DENIED ITS JUST REWARD, SAYS DR. LATHROP

Rev. Dr. J. H. Lathrop of Brooklyn, N. Y., in his noon address today in King's Chapel, regretted that labor did not get its just reward for its work.

"If religion was the test of action and not the test of belief, how many things in this world would be adjusted," said Dr. Lathrop. "Labor has not its just reward for its work, in consequence of this. Men are too much absorbed today in the thought of getting along without the thought of giving. We hope for the day of perfect justice, when many of the social problems may be solved."

Captain A. M. Ropes, Noted Salem Skipper, Dead at the Age of 83

SALEM, Jan. 3.—Captain Andrew M. Ropes, dean of the retired Salem sea captains, who doubled Cape Horn thirty-five times, fought pirates at the age of twenty and sailed into every port of consequence in the world, died at the Salem Hospital today at the age of eighty-three.

He was a native of Salem, attended the old Phillips School, went to the United States Naval School at Charlestown at the age of eleven and went to sea when he was thirteen.

When he was twenty he signed as second mate on the famous clipper ship Ringleader under Captain Richard Matthews. The Ringleader had fights with pirates, and young Ropes looked death in the face often on these voyages.

At twenty-two he sailed out of Salem harbor master of his own ship and one of the youngest skippers afloat. He doubled the Cape of Good Hope sixteen times.

He retired with a snug fortune twenty-five years ago, bought a house on Essex street and was made the second honorary member of the Salem Marine Society. He spent most of his last years at The society rooms, spinning yarns with other old skippers.

The doughty old skipper was unmarried. He is survived by two nieces.

FOSS MESSAGE EXPLAINS HIS 98 PARDONS

Governor Foss today in his first message to the Legislature of 1913 officially informs the General Court that ninety-eight pardons have been given to convicted persons during the past year by the Governor and Council.

The message gives the records of each individual pardon case, together with the reasons for pardoning.

Governor Foss stated that ten of the sixty-eight pardoned were murderers serving life sentences. One of these, David Money, had served thirty-two years. Another had served twenty-eight years. Of the other murderers pardoned, one had served twenty-five years, two had served twenty-two years, one twenty years and the rest less than twenty years.

Chin Toy and Wong Chung, Chinamen, had served the shortest terms of the murderers pardoned. Each had served eight years for shooting up Chinatown.

The message also touched on the cousing of Leun Cusumano's sentence to life imprisonment.

New Year's Chimes Rang Out Tunes Very Unlike Hymn Music

MERIDEN, Ct., Jan. 3.—Something happened in Meriden New Year's morning—they don't know what yet, because the evidence is conflicting.

When the chimes of St. Paul's Universalist Church rang out a greeting to the new year, at midnight, several people of previously good repute living within sound of the bells declare they recognized such tunes as "How Dry I Am" and "I'd Rather Have Fingers Than Toes."

So sure were they of what they heard that comment became criticism and criticism produced complaint.

Chimes Master Horace Doolittle, also of previously good repute equal to that of his accusers, when remonstrated with today by a trustee of the church, indignantly denied the unseemly levity implied in the tunes they say his chimes spilled upon the New Year's morning air. Doolittle says he played "O, Happy Day" and "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds" and that's all, and that people of the neighborhood apparently don't even know even the most common of the hymns when they hear them.

FINANCE BOARD TO LOOK INTO TUNNEL TOLL

The question of tolls in the East Boston tunnel is to be investigated by the Boston Finance Commission, according to the provisions of a bill offered by Representative Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston today.

Giblin believes that there is enough revenue being derived by the Elevated from advertising signs and the rent of space for telephone, telegraph wires, conduits, etc., to pay the public's share of the expenses of the tunnel without the one-cent toll.

The Giblin bill also would amend the city charter so that the Mayor's term might be reduced to two years instead of four. A referendum is provided for in the bill.

The State Branch of the American Federation of Labor filed today two bills, one entitled "Peaceful Persuasion," and the other "Public Opinion." The first provides that peaceful persuasion shall be permitted in cases of strikes and lockouts, and the other wishes that all legislation of public interest should be referred to the voters for an expression of opinion.

Pantaloons "Go Out" for Skirt in China; Pannier Prohibited

PEKIN, Jan. 3.—Pantaloons for Chinese women were discarded today by an edict published by President Yuan Shi Kai. The proper garb in future shall be the skirt of Occidental nations.

The edict prohibits not only trousers, but the pannier or drape skirt as well.

It also provides drastic changes in men's garments. The sack or cutaway coat is prescribed as the only business garb and the evening dress for functions. The derby hats are the exclusive field for every day and the high hat for society. High raiskin or low tan shoes are permitted the men. The women may wear any style of high shoe.

Chinese women are greatly restricted in their choice of dresses. For every day a loose-fitting garment like a Mother Hubbard is prescribed. For best wear a plaited skirt of conventional type and a simple shirt waist are specified.

CLARK STAYS ON COMMERCE BOARD

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce today agreed to report favorably the nomination of Edgar E. Clark to succeed himself as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

MOB BATTERS DOWN DOOR OF GARMENT SHOP

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—One of the most serious riots of the Garment Workers' strike occured today, when 1,000 men attacked the offices of the Washington clothing Company at Astor place, following a report that non-union men were being put to work there.

Before the arrival of the police reserves from the Mercer street station the door had been battered down by the mob. Withdrawn clubs, the police attacked the rioters and drove them off. Several strikers were badly beaten but none were seriously hurt.

Public Notice!

On March 1st, Mr. Georges, Sr., retires from the Georges business which he founded away back in 1879—and I take over complete ownership.

While I have been for years the dynamo of energy and originality back of the brilliantly successful Georges stores in five cities, yet I never fully realized the magnificent possibilities of spreading the Georges policy and ideas until a few weeks ago, when I assumed entire management of the business to effect a compulsory reorganization. I can now see in the future a Georges store in every principal city, and it makes me intensely anxious that this reorganization shall raise for me the necessary cash to make my settlement with the retiring senior member. My present merciless sacrificing of the great stocks throughout my 5 stores is evidence of my eagerness to get control, and to grow, unhampered by the bonds of conservatism.

My Final Reorganization Effort

Georges

My Present Clothes Values Surpass anything ever before offered in Boston

Success comes to a business in exact proportion as that business serves the people.

This is an established law of trade. Bear it in mind when you hear Georges criticised for seemingly "sensational" methods. Our success is a living example of that popular truism, "every knock is a boost."

Take our experience in Boston. We came here strangers in March, 1908, less than five years ago, opening a single store on Summer St. This rapidly grew into the annexing of the adjoining building and when the Filene deal necessitated our removal, the Georges business had increased so tremendously that we were compelled to occupy our present entire building at WASHINGTON AND FRANKLIN STS.

where we are conducting today the largest individual men's and young men's clothing business in Boston. The same success has been ours in New York, Providence, Philadelphia and Buffalo, as well. Was all this an accident?

Now I am making a bid for still greater fame, a still larger patronage, and incidentally the complete ownership of the Georges business, by the heaviest price reductions of my career to turn my vast stocks of beautiful Georges model clothes in five cities into immediate cash. This is my supreme value-giving effort.

ANOTHER GIRL TELLS HOW SHE LIVED HERE ON $8 WEEKLY WAGE

The announcement by the Commission of Social Service of the Inter-Church Federation of Philadelphia that no self-respecting girl or woman can live in Philadelphia for less than $8 a week has been sent broadcast over the country, as a warning to women and girls, who contemplate looking for work in that city. This $8 per week is divided as follows:

Room and two meals a day	$5.00
Luncheons	1.20
Clothing and incidentals	1.80
Total per week	$8.00

The commission in its statement declares that "so many dangers beset the self-supporting woman who has an inadequate wage or is out of employment for any length of time that we feel justified in issuing this caution and warning."

Is it unsafe for a girl to come down to Boston from Maine or New Hampshire and accept work which will pay her less than $8 a week?

Is that the lowest figure of respectable support for a girl or woman in Boston?

It is the low-water in Philadelphia, according to the warning issued from that city, and Bostonians have immediately brought the question home to themselves.

The AMERICAN is receiving letters daily discussing this subject. Some writers —working girls, many of them—say that city life is not to be thought of on less than $8 a week, and is barely endurable at that.

Others figure out a living that, by great ingenuity, can be scaled to the required figure.

These letters are being printed daily by the AMERICAN. In order to show good faith, but not necessarily for publication, letter writers should sign their real name and address. Also, write on one side of the paper only.

For the five best letters giving the most information as to how $8 per week may be most judiciously spent by working girls and women, with such information as may be helpful—that is, concerning wages, etc.—the AMERICAN will pay $10 each. For the ten letters adjudged the net best the AMERICAN will pay each of the writers $5.

The letters must be addressed: The AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. This newspaper hopes that women and girls who have had experience in shops, stores, mills, factories, and so on, and in boarding or rooming houses, or living alone or with associates, will write at once, giving all the information at their disposal. Some of the letters to the AMERICAN follow:

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

A girl can live on $8 a week and live respectably, for I have done it. But I found it constantly difficult. My health most fortunately continued good. I had no unusual expenses, that is, dentists' bills, loss of work—which is the same as an expense—or other extraordinary outlays.

For eight months I earned just $8 a week and I lived on just that, not a cent more or less.

I paid $2 a week for a ball bed room.

My breakfasts and suppers cost me 25 cents apiece, which was 50 cents a day, or $3.50 a week.

My week-day lunches cost me twenty cents a day and my Sunday dinner cost me thirty-five cents. This made my board come to a total of $5.05 a week.

This made $7.05 out of my $8, leaving me 95 cents a week for laundry, car fare (in the rain) and clothing(?). I put a question mark after the word "clothing," for it was often a question in my mind whether the cheap, insufficient garments I could master could properly be called clothing for even a working girl.

A girl CAN subsist on $8 a week and keep respectable, but that's about all.

CALLS $10.40 LOWEST GIRL CAN LIVE UPON

By SYBIL WARNE.

Here's the lowest that a working woman can live upon and keep up her appearances and feel that there is some pleasure in living, according to Miss Josephine Mullowney, in charge of women's department of the Free State Employment Bureau:

Clothes	$2.00
Board	4.00
Room rent and carfare	3.40
Washing	.60
Recreation	.50
Church	.50
Total	$10.40

Miss Mullowney has had extensive experiences with workingwomen and knows what will bring cheer and happiness into their lives. She puts an adequate salary at $10.40. She says:

She Explains Her List.

Eight dollars a week is too small for the average working woman. I know what I am saying. My life has been thrown in with them for the past six years, and I have heard many a tale of woe from them. It is in many instances a very sad tale.

Take the matter of room and put with it carefare. You know that I put this down at $3 a week. That's the lowest that it can be put at. You can get a room for $1.50 a week, but what sort of a room is it? Here is a woman who has no home except the room where she sleeps. It ought to be a good-sized room. She ought to have it alone. Now, if the room is all the home that she has, should it not be comfortable and attractive?

Then after a woman has spent the whole day in working hard, she ought to have some time to think, to relax in her own room. For that reason, she ought to have the room alone. There are times, when we want to be alone. Just ourselves. This is so with the working woman. Oh! I get so sorry for them and what they have to undergo.

They have no society or only a few friends.

$3 for Room Rent.

When I put the room rent down at $3.50 a week it is really small enough. The room is often a mere shelter. In it they would like to have few artistic things. Why, working women have artistic tastes. They like pretty things for decoration.

Then about the matter of board. Is $4.00 too much to pay a week? Now just look at it this way? A healthy woman wants good things to eat and plenty of them. If she stints herself on her food, it will show it in her general health.

You cannot keep up the glow of health on cheap food. You want good nourishing food and I believe if a woman is to do credit to her position, she ought to have it.

Suppose men went on small allowances of food as many working women have to do in this city. Would they enjoy it? If a man wants to keep in good spirits, he wants tolerably good things to eat.

Is it any different with a working woman? Four dollars a week just for food is the cheapest. Anything less than this means, in many instances, impoverished, physical conditions.

Then there is the matter of washing. Sixty cents is not too much.

Women often wash their own clothing. Men seldom under like conditions do. Women should have some of the time given to washing when they get home for reading.

Did you ever stop to think how little time the average woman has for reading?

Just let her send to the laundry some of the things to be washed. Just her have more time for reading. That's why I put her laundry up to 60 cents.

Well? what about clothes? She must look well. How can she really look well in clothes that have been made over and over again? Then she has not often enough clothes to change them.

So I put clothes down to $2 a week, which is very moderate. This constant mending when you come from a hard day's work is enough to take the vitality out of any woman. It is nerve racking.

Then every working woman should have some recreation. This goes without saying. Is 60 cents a week too much for this?

So you will see that my figures are low. Now I maintain that you will get more out of the working women, if you give them wholesome food, recreation and good clothing.

Lowrie, Author of 'My Life in Prison,' Granted a Pardon

Donald Lowrie, whose serial story entitled "My Life in Prison," is now appearing in the AMERICAN, has received a pardon from Governor Hiram W. Johnson of California, on recommendation of the Supreme Court. He was on parole after serving out quite five years of a fifteen-year sentence in San Quentin prison for burglary.

Lowrie's story is a true revelation of conditions as they exist in prison. Twice sentenced, the first time for burglary in Los Angeles County, he was freed February 13, 1905, after serving five years, only to be re-arrested in May of the same year, receiving for this the fifteen-year sentence.

Paroled, he turned social worker and his stories on life in prison and on criminology have won him recognition.

MAYOR HARRISON CUTS OWN PAY WHEN 20,000 ARE DOCKED

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Mayor Carter Harrison has voluntarily reduced his own salary 20 per cent, following a similar reduction made by the city authorities in the pay of 20,000 municipal employes.

The cut was decided upon as the only solution of a budget estimate $4,500,000 greater than the revenue of the city. The reduction was bitterly opposed. An attempt to make up the deficit from the fund obtained as the city's share of the profits of the street car companies was defeated. The Legislature will be asked to past laws by which the city's income may be increased. If this is obtained it is planned to reimburse employes for wages withheld.

The Life of Achievement

Nervous wrecks die early, but the men who do one big thing after another are the men who exercise common sense in their eating.

Big doers learn early that the mind and stomach cannot be overtaxed at the same time. Simple food helps them build strong bodies.

Make H-O Oatmeal your breakfast mainstay. Oatmeal helped to make your grandfather and great-grandfather vigorous and able. It will do as much for you.

A big dish of H-O Oatmeal each morning will make possible a bigger day's work for anyone.

A package makes 36 dishes

H-O

the only steam-cooked

Oatmeal

Thorough cooking is necessary to develop the full nutriment in oatmeal.

While other oatmeals need 2½ hours' cooking before they are done, H-O can be thoroughly cooked in only 20 minutes, because it is steam-cooked at the mill.

CASSIDY TELLS ABOUT BENZOATE OF SODA AND SACCHARINE IN FOODS

H. P. Cassidy.

Harry P. Cassidy today tells something of the use of "benzoate of soda," a preservative much favored by food swindlers.

He also introduces you to "saccharine," a coal tar product five hundred times as sweet as sugar, but with no more nutriment in it than in an oak chip. And he gives a little incident from his experience that will tell you something you didn't know about cheese—Gorgonzola.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Benzoate of soda is a preservative manufactured from the organic excretion of cattle and horses.

Saccharine is a substance extracted from coal tar, is five hundred times sweeter than sugar, but has no food value whatever.

Barytes-barium-sulphate, is used to adulterate white paint.

Let me introduce these three substances to you today as additions to your menu, put there by the food fakers.

Benzoate of soda is allowed, by the government pure food law, in four products in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of one per cent. Let me make this statement in the beginning. I personally do not believe it should be allowed to appear in food at all.

Benzoate is extracted from the refuse of cattle and horses. Physicians say it is an extremely dangerous substance, and while "not an active poison, should never be administered except under prescription and under carefully guarded conditions.

Has Its Good Uses.

It is a preservative. Its use is perfectly legitimate under the law. Its use, or the use of some preservative, is probably all right to protect such products as catsup from decay.

Where it is used to prevent decay in catsup made from good, pure, sweet tomatoes, I have no quarrel with it. It is probably very slightly injurious. Though if a preservative could be found that was not dangerous or deleterious at all, that would be infinitely better.

But the trouble is that some catsup makers are not careful of the quality of their catsup. And some, according to a United States report I have before me, use decomposed, putrid and filthy waste from canneries for their product.

This United States report contains the record of many convictions for the use of such decomposed tomatoes. These are the "reports of judgments" issued by the enforcers of the national pure food law.

If you doubt my word in the matter, look in these reports. The companies accused and convicted are small concerns, of which you would not recognize the names.

Benzoate of soda is invariable in these concerns. I looped into the thick, red mass of decomposing tomatoes being prepared for their catsup. It at once arrests decay and makes it possible for them to market their goods.

The catsup so prepared and so preserved would, however, have some taste of the vegetables under ordinary circumstances. The benzoate itself is tasteless, but the tomatoes are not.

Therefore, the makers had to find some strong flavor that would counteract this taste, cloak it as in a blanket, and send the foul catsup down your throat, undetected.

Introducing Saccharin.

Enter saccharin.

Saccharin is a substance extracted from coal tar. It is one of the innumerable "coal tar products," It is 500 times sweeter than sugar, but has absolutely no food value—no more, or not as much, as an oak chip would have.

But it's sweet. That makes it valuable to the cheap candy makers, and the adulterated soda flavor makers, and the makers of all sorts of food frauds. It also makes it invaluable to the catsup manufacturers —those of them who use bad tomatoes.

They drug their catsup with the saccharin, and no one would ever notice the putrid taste of the tomatoes.

Benzoate is not necessarily harmful itself, if properly used. Neither is saccharin. The latter is a medicine used with good effect in diabetes cases, if properly handled. But thousands of physicians have warned their own profession against its use. Yet it is dumped into "food products by unscrupulous manufacturers.

Both these substances are harmful, therefore, if improperly used. Their greatest crime, however, is in covering the impure and decomposed foods used in many food compounds.

I mentioned barytes. My experience with barytes rests on a case in Philadelphia. Complaints came in of illness following the eating of some gorgonzola cheese. The cheese was imported from Italy.

Rind Made of Paint.

It was analyzed. We found that the rind, the hard coating of the cheese, was really nothing less than barytes, "hard paint," used in adulterating white lead, and mixed with iron rust to give color.

The mixture was poisonous. It was not a part of the cheese, but it was found that some of the poison had penetrated into the cheese, causing the illness reported. A dealer paid a fine.

The danger of poison from this adulterant was not great. But the chief fraud came in the weight of the barytes. The adulterant is heavy, and the consumer who paid for a pound of gorgonzola was really paying for one to three ounces of barytes, inedible and poisonous.

These weight frauds explain much of the high cost of living, if people would only realize it. I'm going to discuss that at length later.

Zueblin May Speak.

Mrs. Ida M. Heburd, leader of the Housekeepers' League egg war, today announced that she is negotiating with a view to securing Professor Charles Zueblin as a speaker at the Faneuil Hall meeting planned by the league. She said:

I expect an answer from Professor Zueblin soon. I'm hoping that he and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Phillips and Rabbi Fleischer will speak. As soon as I have secured their promises I shall arrange with the Mayor for Faneuil Hall.

James J. Hill Has Plan to Double the Grains of the West

ST. PAUL, Jan. 3.—Into the greenhouses of James J. Hill, in the rear of his residence here, where Mr. Hill has been carrying on for the last two months an experiment expected to revolutionize agriculture, six men representing commercial and financial Minneapolis, were guided to witness astonishing results in wheat, oats and barley culture, achieved by new chemical soil analysis and its practical application.

Phosphorus has been found to be the great essential plant food lacking in the soil of the Northwest, and Mr. Hill has found the way, he told the Minneapolis men, to increase soil fertility.

LIST 13 "CHILD ENEMIES" IN CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2.—There are thirteen "Child enemies" in California, according to Dr. L. M. Powers, the city health commissioner, who told who they are and where they live, as follows:

1.—Doctors who don't report their cases of contagious diseases.
2.—Dirty milkmen.
3.—Flies.
4.—Tubercular cows.
5.—Persons who conceal contagious diseases.
6.—Hooky pokey men.
7.—Reckless automobile speeders.
8.—Violators of quarantine.
9.—Manufacturers of adulterated candy.
10.—Manufacturers of adulterated foods.
11.—Child slave employers.
12.—Parsimonious taxpayers who place the hoardings of money above measures for the protection of child life.
13.—Mothers who needlessly deprive their babies of mother's milk.

MRS. PAGE FIGHTS HIGH COST OF DYING

The "sting" of death of which the poet sang, is in the undertaker's bill, according to Mrs. Christian D. Page of No. 416 Marlboro street, wife of a physician. Today, at a meeting at her home, she will put rhetorical crepe on the door knobs of the funeral directors' safes. She says:

That interests me. The high cost of dying interests me. People don't realize how costly it is. There seems to be a combination or trust in all things. Impurities and adulteration of food have increased the death rate. Well, the old adage says: "There is never any loss without a little gain to somebody." Now, who has been gaining?

The undertaking business has been reaping the harvest that comes from impure food. As a physician's wife, I know how hard it is for people to bury their loved ones. The floral display is very expensive. It is getting to be like Christmas.

Then, again, the undertakers charge people according to their surroundings and it is easy to conclude that people are rich or well-to-do if their surroundings are attractive. The burial accounts do not always support this idea. The undertaker first inquires regarding the life insurance and makes sure that his bill will come out of that.

MISS CURTIS AND HARRIS OUTLINE TWO PLATFORMS

TWO SCHOOL PLATFORMS.

MISS FRANCES G. CURTIS—Study of languages in the lower grades and vocational training. Continuation schools.

ISAAC HARRIS—Meals at school for anaemic children. Extension of romantic language study.

These are the platforms on which Miss Frances G. Curtis, the Public School Association's candidate for School Board, and Isaac Harris, her opponent, are fighting it out.

Miss Curtis does not agree with Mr. Harris in his plea for the extension of the romantic languages, but she is for a further study of languages in the lower grades. She says:

It is a reproach to the country, our neglect of the languages. Anybody who has mastered even one foreign language has come to appreciate the education it has given him. His study has brought home to him the big truth that there are two ways of saying things—two ways of thinking things. For that reason rather than for mere accomplishment, I am heartily in favor of the study of foreign languages in the lower grades of our schools, where the children, being young, can learn them easily.

Then there are the continuation schools, which have been tried with great success in one or two Western States, and especially in Germany. A child who leaves school at the age of fourteen drops his studies at a critical age. If the schools could retain their hold on him two or three more years, the benefit to him and to the community would be incalculable.

Mr. Harris says:

I do not favor the feeding of children by the wholesale at public expense, but I do believe that free luncheons should be furnished for the undernourished and anaemic children.

I also favor the extension of study of the romantic languages in the high schools.

BAILEY, OIL MAN, IN FINAL PLEA TRIES TO EVADE PROVEN GUILT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—On the eve of his retirement from the Senate Joseph Weldon Bailey of Standard Oil notoriety delivered a valedictory tirade to that dignified body. Like Senator Lorimer, when the latter was expelled from the Senate last Summer, Senator Bailey bitterly attacked William Randolph Hearst as the cause of his political downfall.

And when Henry F. Ashurst, the Progressive Democratic Senator from Arizona, unable to restrain himself, interrupted to protest, the Senator from Texas offered to take him outside and fight.

After Mr. Bailey had sung his swan song Mr. Ashurst replied.

Today or Saturday Mr. Bailey will tender his formal resignation from the Senate. His term would have expired on March 3 anyhow. Representative Morris Sheppard already having been chosen as his successor, but Mr. Bailey resigns now in the hope that the Texas Legislature now in session will elect his personal friend, Colonel R. M. Johnston, for the two remaining months of the term.

Attacks Hearst.

Mr. Bailey's speech was a general attack on the initiative and referendum, an exploitation of his ideas of real democracy and his malutenance that a direct form of government would send the republic to the bow wows.

By way of leading up to his attack on Mr. Hearst, Bailey said he was convinced the present popular unrest was due to the attitude of the newspaper men of the country. He referred sarcastically to lists of "millionaire Senators" that had been published, and added, "If any one wants to organize a syndicate to buy me out, I shall be very glad to have them offer less than half a million."

After the papers had grown used to calling the Senate a "millionaires' club," Bailey said, they began attacking individual Senators, demanding to know where they got the millions they did not have. It was at this point in his farewell to public life that Bailey hastily picked up from his desk a copy of Hearst's magazine and holding it aloft, waave all could see, he shouted: "I have here a magazine owned by one William Randolph Hearst, a moral pervert, a political degenerate and a physical coward."

Offers to Fight.

Mr. Ashurst—Sir, President.

The President pro tem—Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. Bailey—I do.

Mr. Ashurst—I would be false to friendship.

Mr. Bailey—If you want to reply you reply outside. You do not interrupt me for that.

Mr. Ashurst—I will when you get through, sir.

The President pro tem—The Senator from Texas declines to yield.

Mr. Bailey—This miserable dog, who has assailed me for years and expects to escape my denunciation, is mistaken. He has in this magazine an attack on me in which he says that Senator R. is no end in the Senate. This letter is dated on the 20th of February, in 1900, and I did not become a Senator until the 4th of March, 1901.

"The letter referred to by Mr. Bailey bore the date of February 26, 1905, and not 1900.)

"Stolen" Letters.

"That is the kind of attacks that are made on the public men. There is nothing in this letter to which I object, but you know, Mr. President, if they will pretend that they stole a letter like they did this, when I studied how they taught me that to receive stolen property, knowing it to be stolen made a man as guilty as the thief who stole it.

"The only opinion attributed to me in this letter is that I would be opposed to any law that would authorize any officer to come into my business place and demand to see my books in order to see what profit I was making. Would not anybody else be opposed to that?

"Yet that is the only thing attributed to me.

"I do not know whether I ever said that or not. I suppose I may have said it because I knew I would say it, for it expresses distinctly my opinion.

Calls Hearst "Creature."

"Mr. President, I believe I will go a little further in this matter, although I only intended to allude to it so far as it related to me. The whole attack upon the Senate of the United States perhaps illustrates as well as anything else could, the character of the whole crusade.

"For years this creature, whose name the magazine bears, has been assailing the American public with statement after statement that the whole United States Senate was practically in the employment of the Standard Oil Company. Yet when they find people who are base enough to sell these files of the Standard Oil Company, they find only three or four Senators with whom there was any correspondence, and with some of them not any correspondence reveals official corruption.

"Why, Mr. President, this man, in one of his speeches in 1908, read a letter which Mr. John D. Archbold had written to a Senator here, enclosing a certificate of deposit for $50,000. That Senator replied that that certificate of deposit related to a transaction wholly apart from any official duty or any official question.

"Hearst replied by publishing another letter in which Mr. Archbold had called to the attention of this Senator a certain bill known as the Jones bill, and thought to create in the public mind a belief that the $50,000 certificate had some relation to the Jones bill, and yet Hearst had in his possession that minute a letter of the Senator returning the certificate of $50,000, dated ten days before the letter concerning the Jones bill was ever written.

"Senators, whose character is safe if men may be assailed in this way?"

The Senators listened with amazement to the language of the Senator from Texas.

Ashurst Defends Hearst.

Mr. Ashurst made the following reply:

During his address the Senator from Texas adverted to William Randolph Hearst and, if I understood the Senator's words aright, he intended to impute some questionable motives to Mr. Hearst.

I would be false to the conduct I have marked out for myself and false to a valued friend, if I did not in this place say that while I know nothing of the differences which exist between Mr. Hearst and the Senator from Texas (Mr. Bailey), I am able to say that I know Mr. Hearst to be a loving father, a faithful husband, a loyal friend and a man whose name is honorably associated with the auspicious commencement and successful consummation of hundreds of movements that make for the strength of the State, the happiness, the prosperity, the glory and the greatness of our nation.

I believe, moreover, that Mr. Hearst is a sincere patriot, a true friend of the people and a man of great courage and foresight.

On this subject, more than this need not be said, and less than this by me could not be said.

Senator Ashurst then replied to Mr. Bailey's attack on the initiative and referendum, sustained the recall of judges and defended the cause of progressivism.

Defend Progressivism.

Senator Ashurst answered nearly every one of the propositions laid down by Mr. Bailey. In a brilliant peroration he said:

He is wasting his time who believes he can stay or stop these forward movements in their progress. The movement especially in behalf of those who perform physical labor, for a greater share of freedom, for the right to enjoy a part of the creation of their hands and of their own toil, will inevitably lie, for it is as broad based as the world itself and deep as humanity.

Highway Board Favors New Laws to Govern Autos

Recommendations for many important changes in the laws governing the operation of automobiles, are made in the annual report of the State Highway Commission, submitted to the Legislature today.

As to its supervision of telephone companies, the commission says that it should be permitted to continue its study of the question in general and the new rate schedule in effect in Boston and the Metropolitan District in particular, before any changes are made by the Legislature.

The report states that the number of automobile accidents during the past year has increased at a faster ratio than the increase in the number of automobiles in operation. It should recommend in this connection that an absolute maximum speed limit of twenty-five miles be fixed and that the present maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment for reckless driving or operation while under the influence of liquor, be increased.

ALBERT HUDSON'S WIFE APPEALS FOR HIM TO COME HOME

Albert Hudson of Winchester, the story of whose disappearance was printed in the AMERICAN on Wednesday, telegraphed his wife from an address on High street in Boston saying he was in trouble and wanted money. When Mrs. Hudson sended the address given in the telegram he had disappeared. Then she came to the AMERICAN office with this message for her husband:

Albert, please come home. The children want you and I cannot live without you. Nothing but love and forgiveness awaits you at home and your employers will give you a chance to atone your fault. My heart is broken and my strength nearly spent.

COURT SAYS MAYOR IS THEATRE CENSOR

According to a decision handed down today by the full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court the Mayor of any city has a right to revoke the license of a theatre if he believes that the character of the productions is detrimental to public morals. This decision was rendered in the case of Jesse Mellana and John H. Flon, managers of the Lyceum Theatre in Woburn, who sought to test the constitutionality of the law, after the Mayor of Woburn revoked their theatre license.

GRAND TRUNK REPEAL BILL IN THE HOUSE

Representative William A. Sullivan of Boston filed a bill at the State House today providing for the repeal of the so-called Grand Trunk act of last year, which gave the Southern New England Railroad corporation authority to extend its lines into Massachusetts.

The Southern New England was the subsidiary road which was to be constructed as an extension of the Grand Trunk into Massachusetts, Boston and Rhode Island. How construction was begun on this and then stopped is the transportation scandal of the day.

Representative Sullivan's name is signed to his bill as petitioner for this proposed legislation. The bill provides for repeal of every section of the "Grand Trunk" act.

The purpose of the bill is to prevent the interests behind the Southern New England from resuming building operations in this State in case the New Haven Railroad refuses to live up to the traffic agreement which it is alleged to have made with the Grand Trunk and which resulted in the Grand Trunk ceasing operations in Massachusetts.

If this bill becomes law it will be tantamount to a declaration by Massachusetts that it wishes nothing more to do with the Southern New England.

Czarina Is Cripple; Many Other Sorrows Distress the Czar

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Painful information of widespread unhappiness in the Russian imperial family has reached Queen Alexandra from her widowed sister, the Dowager Empress.

In the first place the Czarina is in worse health than ever. Neuritis has increased and so affected the Czarina's limbs that she cannot walk. She is moved from room to room on a couch. At other times, reclining in a beautiful boat shaped sleigh, she is driven in the park.

Next among the distresses of the Czarina is the fact that his younger sister, Grand Duchess Olga, wife of Duke Peter of Oldenburg, finds herself unhappily married. She has asked the Czar for permission to secure a divorce, so that she may marry a young officer of the Chevaliers. The Emperor has angrily refused permission.

But it is against his brother, Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, that the Czar's hottest anger is directed. After his marriage with the divorced Mme. Sheremetievskaia, Grand Duke Michael made an irrevocable marriage settlement on her. This so infuriated the Czar that he struck his brother's name from membership in the imperial household.

H. B. WILLIAMS LEFT ESTATE OF $494,514

The late Henry Bigelow Williams of the Back Bay left an estate valued at $494,514, according to an inventory filed today in the Probate Court. The inventory disclosed that Mr. Williams held a mortgage of $175,000 on the Hotel Carlton, that he also owned 250 shares of Hotel Victoria stock,

SOLONS HURRY TO PASS BILL FOR THEIR PAY

Both branches of the Legislature later settled down to business, holding brief sessions which scores of petitions for legislation were received and referred to committees.

In the House, the Committee on Ways and Means sent in the first bill to be acted on at the present session, the annual appropriation bill, carrying $658,778, for the traveling expenses and salaries of the members of the Legislature and legislative attaches. It was given its several readings under suspension of the rules and sent to the Senate for concurrence.

The House adopted an order providing that the hour of meeting shall be 2 o'clock each day, except Saturday, until otherwise provided. Similar action was taken in the Senate.

BULL MOOSE HIT BY FIRST RECALL

SAN JOSE, Cal., Jan. 3.—The first recall election under the new State law was delivered for the recall of State Senator Marshall Black, who was a Progressive leader in the State Senate. He was secretary of the Palo Alto Building and Loan Association, which was closed by order of a State commissioner last Summer, after Black had admitted a shortage of more than $100,000. Partial returns indicate the recall of Black by a large majority and the election of Herbert C. Jones, Republican, to succeed him.

Donovan is supposed to have gone for that purpose.

If "Kid Carter" was not with Mildred Donovan after 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, who was?

The doctors found she had had a drink, or more, of whiskey. Where did she get that? There are no saloons in Malden.

Besides this, it is almost certain, the police say, the girl did not meet her death where the body was found. It is believed she met her death in Boston and that the body was taken to Malden in an automobile or cab.

Captain Foley's Statement.

Captain Timothy J. Foley, acting chief of the Malden Police Department, said:

In spite of the certificate of death filed by Medical Examiner Durell to the effect that the woman died from asphyxia and the apparent absence of foul play, there are queer features to this case which we are determined to solve if possible.

We are positive that the woman was dragged from the roadway into the bushes where she was afterwards found. Had she fallen into the bushes, her arms and legs would have been extended and her clothing more or less rumpled.

We did not find this to be the case. Her clothing was perfectly smooth. Her arms were close to her sides and her feet close together. Mud on the sides and heels of her shoes and on her coat showed conclusively that she was dragged through the mud of the roadway to the spot where found.

We believe that the blood stained handkerchief and gloves to be a plant. The handkerchief was not stained in spots/does, but had been saturated in blood. The gloves had probably been treated in the same manner. To have dragged the body from the place where the handkerchief and gloves were found would have been impossible.

Although the medical authorities have said that the woman's death was due to asphyxia that, in our opinion, does not clear the mystery of how the body came to be in the bushes.

DIED OF NATURAL CAUSES, SAYS MEDICAL EXAMINER

Medical Examiner Thomas M. Durell of Somerville came out today with the emphatic statement that Mrs. Mildred Donovan, victim of the Malden death mystery, died as the result of natural causes. He said:

It is my opinion that Mrs. Donovan died from asphyxia produced by an epileptic fit. I don't think her death was the result of foul play. The statement that I attributed death to strangulation is incorrect.

There were no traces whatever of strangulation. I should say, rather, that she died of suffocation. I figure that she had a fit, and, falling on her face, was stifled. That is how asphyxia resulted.

But I cannot say whether she was stricken with epilepsy on the spot where she was found, or elsewhere. That is something beyond medical deductions.

The fact that when discovered the body was lying on its back would indicate that it had been stirred or carried after the woman had become unconscious or had died. But other evidence would have to fix this feature.

"Blow Not From Fist."

I signed the death certificate "asphyxia." That finding is conditional. Should Professor Whitney's chemical analysis of the stomach show traces of poison or reveal other evidence of foul play I shall add to the certificate the contributary cause of asphyxia. Therefore, I reserved recording the full and final report. Quite frankly, I don't mind saying that I don't expect anything to develop from Professor Whitney's examination.

The stomach was removed merely as a medical precaution to avoid chance of error. We don't expect anything to come of it. Professor Whitney has not reported yet. I don't look for his report for two or three days.

Mrs. Donovan was a large woman and apparently capable of handling herself. There was no evidence of attack. The only mark we found on her body was the cut on the bridge of her nose. No, I don't think, in fact, I am almost certain that this wound could not have been made with a fist. It was too clean and small to be made by a fist blow.

"No Violence Indicated."

It was an angular cut, extending about a half inch on one side of the bridge and lapping over about a quarter inch on the other. It went into the bone. It was just such a wound as would be caused by a fall upon a stone or hard substance. There were no stones where the body lay, but there were some scattered nearer the slope from the street.

While the spot where the body was found was weird and desolate, I understand that friends of the young woman say she often used a short cut across the marshes to and from her home in Revere. I don't think a woman of her build would fear walking in that lonely section.

There are queer circumstances connected with the affair, particularly the alleged complicity of the young pugilist. It is singular, to say the least, that he should have become mixed up in another tragedy so soon after he admits having been in this woman's company.

There was nothing about the body, as revealed by the autopsy, that indicated violence of any sort, or murder. There were no traces of drugs, poison or liquor. There was nothing that aroused our suspicions.

Everything was perfectly consistent with a subtle due to an attack of epilepsy, but we decided to have Professor Whitney make a careful chemical analysis of the stomach to make doubly sure.

It would be greatly surprised if Professor Whitney should report the presence of poison. I don't look for any change of my present views on the case.

"CASCARETS" MAKE YOU FEEL GREAT

A 10 cent box will keep your liver, stomach and bowels clean for months.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace it to torpid liver, delayed fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes confusion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Salts, cathartic pills, oil and purgative waters force a passageway for a day or two—yes—but they don't take the poisons out and have no effect upon the liver or stomach.

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels clean and regular for months.

CLEANS THE HAIR AND MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL—25-CENT "DANDERINE"

In a few moments your hair looks soft, fluffy, lustrous and abundant—No falling hair or dandruff.

Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few moments you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of Dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair, what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

M'PHERSON ON DEATH BED DENIED KNOWING WOMAN

Reports that William McPherson and James Brandon Jennings, the pugilist, were probable rivals for the attentions of Mrs. Donovan were exploded by a statement which McPherson made to his mother just before he died at the Boston City Hospital.

McPherson told his mother that he never had seen Mrs. Donovan, and that he did not know and had never seen Jennings before he encountered him in the South End saloon New Year's day. This, it is said, disposes of the theory that the death of Mrs. Donovan and the fatal shooting of McPherson may have been directly connected.

Nevertheless, the theory of the Boston police is that in suspecting McPherson was shadowing him. Jennings made it evident he had something to fear and to conceal.

The police want to find out what that something was. They say also that McPherson was extremely reticent after arriving at the hospital. It now develops that he had domestic trouble and did not wish to have certain matters given publicity. This helped the hypothesis that it was because he was concerned in some way with the Malden tragedy.

McPherson was well known in the South end West ends. He had been a waiter for years and had since worked as bartender. He and his wife were living apart. His mother lives in Brookline. He was twenty-nine and lodged at No. 124 West Concord street.

He was standing near Jennings in a Washington street saloon when he claims the pugilist drew a revolver for an cause and started shooting at him as he hastened for the door. McPherson was struck by two bullets. One penetrated his lung, causing death in twenty-five hours.

CARTER ACTED STRANGELY IN STORE AT DORCHESTER

Samuel and William Hootstein, brothers, who conduct a dry goods store at No. 197 Washington street, Dorchester, near the Mount Bowdoin railroad station, said "Kid Carter" the haircut and the cap he wore when he was captured by the police following the shooting of McPherson.

The fighter, who entered the store with a rush Wednesday about 11 a. m., paid for the articles out of a roll of one five dollar and probably six or seven small bills. Putting on the coat and cap and leaving behind his derby, Carter was seen to take a car going toward Boston.

The Hootstein brothers positively identified newspaper photographs of Carter as the man who had made the purchases.

"Any saloon around here?" was Carter's first question to Samuel Hootstein. He was told that there were several on Blue Hill avenue.

"Got any caps? I want a light one. If you treat me all right, I'll look at a raincoat," Carter said.

William Hootstein held out a raincoat for the fighter to try on and said to him: "You are in the fighting game."

Carter, startled, asked: "Say, how do you know?"

"Because you have a cauliflower ear," he was told.

The man's right ear is deformed from being bruised and swollen from blows received in the prize ring. He squared off and did some shadow boxing. The brothers noticed the fighter's lower lip had been cracked open, and William Hootstein thought he noticed a scratch on the man's nose.

William Hootstein asked Carter his name, and, no reply being forthcoming, asked: "Where are you from? I've seen you fight, I believe."

"Missouri," was Carter's answer. "But I just came down from Portland last night, where I fought Bill McKinnon. And I beat him up, too. Treat me right, kid, and I'll come back and buy a fur coat and diamonds from you. I'm staying with folks in Dorchester."

Carter tried on the cap first and said he wanted to look as fight as possible.

When he put on the coat he said: "Does it look new, fellow?"

"It certainly is new, kid," remarked Samuel Hootstein.

When Carter heard that word "kid" he stared, and then said: "I want it to look new. Come on—it's good enough. I got to get along." William Hootstein said the purchases would amount to $4.50, but Carter assured that that was too much.

The bargain was closed for $3.50. Carter took out a roll of bills and presented a $5 bill. It was then that the brothers noticed that Carter had from five to seven $5 bills more in his hand. While standing for his change the man was noted to be intoxicated.

The death of Mrs. Donovan brings to a sudden termination the divorce proceedings she had instituted. Three attempts had been made to have her marital troubles settled outside the courts.

Return of the writ was just made in the Suffolk Superior Court on the divorce libel which Mrs. Donovan filed on December 2, 1912, against John A. Donovan. The husband was served with the papers on December 5 at his home, No. 259 Sumner street, East Boston, and the dead woman's sister, Miss Gertrude L. Menard of No. 102 this street, Revere, was the identifying witness.

The divorce libel states that the Donovans were married on December 10, 1905, at Boston, and lived at Boston and Revere. On March 1, 1906, so the libel alleges, Mr Donovan began to be cruel and abusive and the divorce was sought on that ground. Mrs. Donovan asked for the custody of her seven-year-old daughter, Dorothy C. Donovan, and also that she be permitted to resume her maiden name of Mildred S. Menard.

It is usual in cases where the libelant or libelee dies before trial to file a motion to dismiss the libel, but this has not been done yet in this case.

Three different attempts were made by the attorney for Mrs. Donovan to have her domestic troubles settled out of court for the sake of the little daughter. For a time it appeared as if each attempt was to be successful, but in the latter part of November, Mrs. Donovan informed her attorney that everything "had gone to smash" and that she wished him to file suit for divorce.

In September last Mrs. Donovan called at the office of her attorney and requested him to start proceedings for a divorce. The attorney questioned her about the cause and when she informed him about her little daughter, he told her that he would like to talk with her parents before he started any proceedings.

Mr. and Mrs. Menard, the parents of the young woman, called on the attorney and a reconciliation was effected, but it was of short duration. Again the troubles were patched up, but only for a short time.

It was said that Donovan, when he was served with the papers in the divorce libel, said that he would not contest the case, when was placed on the docket for trial next Monday. The child, who is heartbroken over the tragedy, is in her

Contradictions in "Kid Carter's" Story

"Kid Carter" told the police that he accompanied Mildred Donovan from Revere to Linden square, Malden, where she left him about 7 p. m., on Tuesday.

BUT if was found that there was a half a glass of whiskey in the woman's stomach. She did not get this in Malden. Where and with whom did she drink?

"Kid Carter" claimed Mildred Donovan gave him her husband's chain, charm and scarfpin in Malden Tuesday evening.

BUT her $25 locket is missing. No purse of any kind was found in her possession, and she had no pockets. How did she carry this jewelry if not in a handbag of some kind?

"Kid Carter" told the police that he left the home of a relative in Dorchester at 9 a. m., Wednesday, with fifteen cents and that he made over $25 shooting craps.

BUT, at 11 a. m., he appeared at a Dorchester store with a roll of money and bought a raincoat and cap, apparently with which to disguise himself, and he TOLD THE POLICE NOTHING ABOUT THIS.

CHILDREN HATE CASTOR OIL, UGH!

Delicious "Syrup of Figs" Best for Their Little Stomachs, Liver and Waste-Clogged Bowels.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the pigsie that mother injected on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. The day of harsh physic is over. We don't force the liver and 30 feet of bowels now; we coax them. We have no dreaded after effects. Mothers who "dig to the root of things" simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their little stomachs and tender bowels are injured by them.

If your child is fretful, peevish, half sick, stomach sour, breath feverish and its little system full of cold; has diarrhoea, sore throat, stomach-ache; doesn't eat or rest well—remember—look at the tongue; if coated, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs, then don't worry, because you surely will have a well, smiling child in a few hours.

Syrup of Figs, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, simply, cannot be harmful. It sweetens the stomach, makes the liver active and thoroughly cleanses the little one's waste-clogged bowels. In a few hours all sour bile, undigested fermenting food and constipated waste matter gently moves on and out of the system without griping or nausea.

Directions for children of all ages, also for grown-ups, plainly printed on the package.

By all means get the genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. Accept nothing else.

CARTER CHANGED CLOTHING THREE TIMES IN THREE HOURS ON FATAL DAY

Two motives have been hinted at in the case by the Malden police and it is freely admitted that neither is very tenable. One motive advanced is that if Mildred Donovan was murdered it was the result of jealousy and the other motive suggests robbery.

The relatives and friends of "Young Kid Carter" call attention to his infatuation for Mrs. Donovan and use it as an argument to refute the suspicion that young Jennings knows how the woman met her death.

The Malden police admit today that investigation of Jenning's story has resulted in corroboration of several details. They claim to have found witnesses who saw him at points which dove-tail with his account of his movements.

Harry Adams, employed as conductor on the Bay State line, said today that he carried "Young Kid Carter" and Mrs. Donovan on his car New Year's evening from Revere to Malden. Adams lives on Highland avenue, Malden. He recalls, and is apparently positive, that Mrs. Donovan and the pugilist boarded his car at Vincent Corner and left it in Linden square at 7:45. He is due at the end of his route on that run at 8 o'clock.

Various other conductors "thought" they saw "couples resembling the pictures in the newspapers," Adams appears to be the only one with a distinct memory on the point.

Phases Puzzle Police.

The Revere inspector who reported he saw Jennings on the Revere Beach boulevard at 9:45 Tuesday night now thinks it was on Monday or Sunday night he saw him.

Jennings was seen alone, riding on a car toward Malden about 8:30. In Chelsea he was seen by four or five men between 9 and 10 o'clock. He called at Fred O'Brien's pool room at No. 106 Broadway, Chelsea, and asked for O'Brien, who is a pugilist. O'Brien was in Boston at the time. Jennings went into several saloons.

He was seen on the street by John Williams, Peter McGauley, Peter Hamlin, Edward O'Brien and Chester O'Connor. These witnesses are all sure it was New Year's eve they saw him. Stories show the young boxer changed his clothing, even to his collars, hats and ties, at least three times in three hours that night.

The police attach importance to this fact as they do also to the fact that he slept at the home of a relative in Dorchester that night instead of going to his own home in Everett.

But they are curious to know why he should have attempted to disguise himself, or to have changed his quarters that night more than any other, when, as the medical examiner reports, Mrs. Donovan was not the victim of murder or foul play of any sort.

The police of Malden are anxious to ascertain the circumstances of Mrs. Donovan's death and to learn why the body was placed among the bushes. They are curious, also, to learn where the young woman

Mother Declares 'Kid Carter' Hoped to Wed Mildred Donovan

James Brandon Jennings, alias "Young Kid Carter," was planning to marry Mrs. Mildred Donovan of Revere in connection with whose death he has been under suspicion ever since her body was found back of a cemetery in Malden, New Year's Day.

Details of the young pugilist's infatuation for his schoolday playmate and of his ambition to wed her were given today by his mother, Mrs. Peter Jennings of No. 635 Broadway, Everett.

Mrs. Jennings tells of how she and the rest of the family looked upon the Revere young woman as "Jimmie's fiancee." They opposed Mrs. Donovan was unmarried.

Mrs. Jennings and her daughter, Mary, who is a public reader, were shocked to learn that Mildred had a husband. She said:

My son James would not harm a hair of Mildred Donovan's head. He was too fond of her. It is absurd even to suspect him in connection with that case. As to the other unfortunate affair in the South End saloon I cannot say a thing.

I suppose it was to happen to the poor boy. He is a victim of circumstance and is being wrongfully suspected and accused in connection with the woman's death. If he had remained away from the fighting ring and its associations he would not be in all this trouble today.

Mildred Donovan would be one of the last persons in the world that he would want to see harmed. James admired her. We looked upon her as his best girl. He spoke of marrying her. No date was fixed. He simply mentioned it.

After he returned from the West they were much together. They had been friends from childhood. I don't think his infatuation for her sprang up until recently. I didn't dream that she was married, nor did my daughter. I don't think James could have known she had a husband, either, or he wouldn't have thought so much about marriage.

That was one of the surprising things about her death. We had never heard of her husband. She seemed to be just as fond of my son as he was of her, and she mentioned her wish to marry him. She visited us with him.

Can Explain Money.

If my son told the police that he had come to Everett from Revere with her to get money, that would not be anything new. But she did not come for money that night, nor did my son or Mildred come into the house at all that evening so far as we are aware.

Where did he get the money then? Well we can explain that money item to everybody's satisfaction when the proper time comes.

He came by it honestly. We know where he got it. If did not come from Mrs. Donovan nor did he have anything to do with any other of her jewelry any more than he did with her death.

Not at Aunt's House.

Do you think it strange, Mrs. Jennings, that your son did not return New Year's eve, but instead went to Dorchester to sleep at his aunt's house?

He didn't sleep at his aunt's house in Dorchester that night. We know where he stayed. No, the house was not on Harvard street as the police reported. They got it wrong.

Did he remain away in that manner on other nights since he returned from the West?

I must decline to discuss that point, just as I must decline to give the name of the person at whose home he stopped New Year's eve.

James was always an unlucky boy. We called him Patsy on that account—"Unlucky Patsy." He has been unlucky in these cases, and especially so in connection with the young woman's death. I have cried repeatedly upon thinking of her, and my heart goes out to her afflicted parents, but my boy had nothing to do with her death.

Points Police Probe.

Many of those working on the case hold to the theory Mrs. Donovan died some distance from where her body was found, probably in some house.

The police are asking:

Why, if Mrs. Donovan died from an epileptic fit, was the body concealed and the authorities not duly notified?

Why did Jennings change his clothing so often that night as alleged?

Why did he sleep in Dorchester instead of Everett?

Why were not the young woman's family told of her death?

Why did the imprisoned boxer tell conflicting stories about where he got the money?

Why did he say he sent Mrs. Donovan into his mother's house for the money and later say he won it shooting craps?

Why, as it appears from statements of members of the Jennings family, if Mrs. Donovan couldn't get into the Jennings home, did she and Jennings not meet in Linden square as agreed?

Did Mrs. Donovan really try to get into the Jennings dwelling on Broadway, Everett?

Why, upon returning, didn't she rejoin "Kid Carter?"

Why didn't he hunt her up and inquire by telephone or otherwise at her home in Revere where she had gone, as he did next day?

What became of her between 7:30 and 4 a. m. when the medical experts estimate she met her death?

What was she doing and where did she go during those seven or eight hours?

Police Aid Boston Case.

The latest and most popular police theory is that "Young Kid Carter" may have been with the young woman when she was suddenly seized with a fit; that she died in convulsions and that her companion, fearing entanglements, took her to the desolate spot where she was discovered the next afternoon.

Unless Professor Whitney's analysis of the stomach reveals traces of drug or poison, no criminal action can be taken against Jennings or anybody else concerning Mrs. Donovan's death, as the medical examiner's report contains no finding of crime or foul play.

Therefore, they would like to learn all the details about Mrs. Donovan's death. It is solely with this purpose in view that Captain Foley and Inspector Greenleaf have decided to sift the matter to the end. They have also been requested to clean up every possible detail for the Boston police, who are forging their chain of evidence against the pugilist in connection with the death of McPherson.

The Malden authorities are positive in the light of latest developments that Mrs. Donovan did not die where she was found. They want to learn how and when her remains were moved and who and how many were concerned in it.

The police say there is little if anything visible upon which to fasten the theory of robbery. It was first reported that a diamond-studded bracelet was stolen from the dead woman's wrist. This is now denied.

The only thing that hasn't been accounted for is a twenty-five-dollar pendant which her father gave her Christmas. Mr. Morand and other members of his household declare that Mrs. Donovan had the pendant on that evening before she went out with "Kid Carter," ostensibly to go to his home in Everett.

Gap of Several Hours.

It has just been learned also that Mrs. Donovan did not have a watch nor did she carry any money with her that evening. She left her purse and chatteleine bag at home. There were no pockets in her apparel, the police say.

Her relatives say that if she was robbed the missing pendant is the only thing to bear out such a theory. It is suggested by the police that this may have been snatched from her neck after death by the person or persons who carried her into the grounds of ragweed.

The police claim to be just as much in the dark as ever concerning the movements of Mrs. Donovan after she was seen leaving the car with Jennings in Linden square about 7:30 or 7:45 Tuesday evening. They have picked up fragments of Jennings' trail from that hour up to 10 p. m. and on his own admission they fill the gap from 2 until 9 A. M. by his account of where he slept in Dorchester.

But Mrs. Donovan's course is still as vague as are the details of her last minutes of life. It is possible, the police argue, that the deductions of the medical experts are slightly in error, and that the young woman may have been dead as early as 8 or 9 o'clock.

The Boston police regard Jennings' admission that he was in Mrs. Donovan's company on the fatal evening as highly significant and as sort of cumulative evidence in the charge growing out of McPherson's death yesterday.

CARTER CHANGED CLOTHES SEVERAL TIMES DURING DAY

In following the movements of "Kid Carter" on the night Mildred Donovan met her death the extraordinary fact that Jennings changed his clothes several times that evening has developed.

When he started out from his home on Tuesday night he wore a gray suit, tan shoes, black derby hat, a turn-down collar and a four-in-hand tie. Edward O'Brien of Chelsea said he saw Jennings later in Chelsea square wearing a cap.

James Williams of Chelsea said he saw Jennings at 9:30 o'clock that night standing in the doorway of No. 106 Broadway, Chelsea, wearing a black derby hat, but he had no overcoat. When Jennings was arrested following the murder of McPherson, he wore a dark suit, black shoes and a fedora.

Fred O'Brien, a pugilist who lives in Chelsea, said:

"On election day Jennings and I were in Yonkers, N. Y., to take part in some boxing matches. I was to the main bout of the evening, while Jennings was scheduled for the semi-final bout. During the bouts Jennings threatened to kill James Duval, my manager, who also acted as second for Jennings and myself. The club officials were forced to eject Jennings from the ring."

SAW MRS. DONOVAN WITH CARTER NEAR SPOT WHERE FOUND

Mrs. Donovan was last seen near Holy Cross Cemetery by Chester O'Connor, who lives on Pine street.

O'Connor rode on the same car with the Donovan girl and Carter to Linden square. She had visited his home, accompanied by her mother, the evening before, O'Connor said.

I boarded the car at Vincent Corner, the transfer point for Malden, at 7 o'clock Tuesday night.

I saw Mildred Donovan, accompanied by Kid Carter, who at that time was wearing a black derby hat. I exchanged greetings with her. At Linden square they left the car. Carter looked sombre and morose. I waved my hand to the girl as she stepped onto the sidewalk and she answered by farewell in a like manner.

The last I saw she was walking down the Linn turnpike toward Holy Cross Cemetery, accompanied by Carter.

In his story to the police Carter admitted having been with the dead girl in Linden square at this time. He said he had sent her in his home because he feared not yet having left Everett, fearing arrest on an old warrant.

No one can be found who saw Carter from the moment O'Connor saw him with the girl at 7:15, up to 8:15, when he reappeared in the square alone.

'PARIS GOWNS FOR ME,' SAYS MARY GARDEN

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—"America never has produced an artist of the first class," says Mary Garden. "It never has produced a singer of international reputation. This great country never has given birth to a composer whose works are of serious consideration. Can it produce a dressmaker whose creations will compare with those of John Worth, Paquin and other designers of feminine apparel whose home is Paris?

"All American artists who have attained any degree of success in Europe coincidentally have had European training.

"I do not believe any American woman, whether she be rich or poor, if she has the money and the opportunity, will turn her back on a Parisian creation and accept an American-designed gown, no matter how beautiful or how graceful its lines. The trouble is that it has not the Paris stamp.

So With the Artists.

"So it is with the great artists. An American singer, an American actress—who will go to see them and pay good American dollars unless they first have the hall mark of European approval?

"So it is with frocks. So it is with millinery. If garments and adornments have the European, or, rather, the Parisian stamp on them, all the women of America say, 'How perfectly lovely.' If told that those same garments were bought in New York or Chicago, these same pretty Americans turn up their dainty noses.

"Ah no," sighed Mary Garden, "just look at my frock! I positively cannot get anything in America that will fit me or look really nice. In Paris, they do more than fit you. I have all my dresses made there, but to me the term 'made' is a misnomer. In Paris my own tailor, my own dressmaker, does not 'make' a dress; he constructs it. He designs it and builds it around me. He is both a creative and a constructive art.

Miss Garden's Gowns.

"When the frock is on me it is a finished product. Every curve and graceful line of the body is accentuated and disguised to its greatest advantage. That is the art of dressmaking. Will the Americans ever reach that conception of the art of dress long?"

Miss Garden, arising and shaking the skirts of a pretty pink dressing gown, which adorned with a big sailor collar of white silk, caught at the neck with a broad gold buckle, remarked:

"This skirt was built for me by a man tailor in Paris who makes all my gowns. Could I get anything quite so chic in Chicago? And you know," she added in a whisper, "they are offering copies of this model in a department store a block or so away at $4.98, and the American women will not buy them."

QUIT CALOMEL!

Thousands Are Turning from This Dangerous Drug.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver tonic in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is in effect almost exactly like the old and well-known calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers.

His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experimenting with the view of discovering a substitute, and he is today in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive-oil colored tablet.

The results of 17 years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They act on the bowels, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities. 10c and 25c per box.

ANGELA MORGAN, WHO READ HER POEM "TODAY"

Miss Angela Morgan and Mrs. Marks Read Poems to Clubwomen

Readings from their own verses by Mrs. Josephine Preston Peabody Marks, the Cambridge poet and playwright, and by Miss Angela Morgan of Dorchester, poet and magazine writer, were part of the program for the conference of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs in the lecture hall of the Boston Public Library this afternoon.

Miss Alice H. Spaulding spoke on drama study. Mrs. Tracewothy White discussed the topic of the afternoon: "Reincarnation of Contemporary Literature to Contemporary Life." Mrs. Henry C. Mulligan, president of the State Federation, presided and took part in the discussion.

The readings by Mrs. Marks and Miss Morgan were selected to show how verse may voice the tremendous activity of the present day. Miss Morgan's selections included her latest magazine contribution, "Today," published in the January Century Magazine. The spirit of the poem is found in the opening line of each of the four stanzas, which runs:

"To-day is alive as such an age!"

The third stanza holds a suffragette hint in these lines:

The signals of the century
Proclaim the things that are to be—
The rise of women to her place,
The coming of a nobler race.

The closing stanza bids the soul to rise and

Fling forth thy sorrow to the wind
And link thy hope with humankind;
Breathe the world-thought, do the world-deed,
Think bigely of thy brother's need.
And what thy woe, and what thy merit
Look to the work the times reveal!

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Cipriano Castro, former President of Venezuela, will be "admitted" to this country tomorrow for one hour. This legal step will be taken, at the instigation of Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel, to avoid international complications. The "admitted" period will be confined to Castro's trip from Ellis Island to the steamship American, which will return him to Germany.

Castro was allowed to give his views of the treatment accorded him, and in the first extended interview expressed freely what he thought of America, its officials and inhabitants.

Castro Very Angry.

The former dictator entered the room attended by his secretary-valet, his sole companion on the voyage to this country. He wore a plain pepper-and-salt suit, dapper velvet cap, twined around with gold leaves, and velvet and gilt slippers. He looked like a man bubbling and seething over with righteous indignation. His black beard fairly bristled; his eyes rolled; his voice declaimed the denunciatory sentences so rapidly that it was all the interpreter could do to keep up with him.

"It has been said that you are planning to start a revolution in Venezuela with money furnished by German interests," was a statement put to the Venezuelan.

Castro became very angry. He pranced up and down the room, waving his hands and shouting at the top of his voice.

"If my intentions were to get German capital for a Venezuelan revolution, do you think I would come to the United States?" he exclaimed. "When I am ready for trouble I will tell you." He paused. "I don't think Germans look on money so easily made as to give it away," he added, more calmly.

"To you feel hurt or injured because your money and land have been taken away from you?"

Once more the fiery little man's tongue started.

Says He's Ruined Man.

"Yes, I am ruined," he exclaimed, dramatically. "Gomez robbed me or 25,000,000 francs. That was all my capital, my own private capital. He even took away my horses and my mules. After my departure from Venezuela, that was the time they robbed me. I left Caracas November 24, 1908. They revolted against me December 19, and took away all my money—all."

"Have you any money in Havana or any capital anywhere else?" he was asked.

"Everything was lost for me in Venezuela," replied Castro, tragically. "Everything—my honor, that is all that is left to me."

It was then that the most dramatic incident of the interview occurred. Calling his valet to his assistance, the little man hastily threw off his coat, and exhibited to the half dozen persons in the room a long scar which he asserted over and over again, was a souvenir of the illness which drove him from his country. Certainly, there was no doubt in the mind of anybody present that the man had suffered a serious operation.

Anna Held Now Denies She Will Rewed Zeigfeld

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Hopping to rumors about her matrimonial and artistic future, Anna Held, today said:

I may go back to Mr. Zeigfeld as my manager but not to marry him. I acknowledge he is the best manager in America, but he has not done enough to win me back since we separated and he did not do enough to hold me when we were married.

I have engaged the new Theatre De Champs Elysees for the American season in Paris to begin June 29, the day of the Grand Prix. The American season will last a month. I will bring over an American chorus of at least forty young men and young girls. The piece is being written for me by a well known Paris author in collaboration with Harry B. Smith, of New York. It will have the best popular songs of New York and overtures and finales of the Paris composer.

Then I will take the piece to America. I, Anna Held, will be my own manager and I, Anna Held, will be my own star.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The automobile show season of 1913 began last night with the formal opening of the salon of imported cars in the grand ball room of the Hotel Astor. Ten of the leading makers of foreign automobiles are represented among the seventy-five complete cars and chassis exhibited.

The new mechanical features of which little has been said in advance shared with the new types of bodies the principal interest of a large number of motorists who attended the salon.

In this connection it is well to remember that such features as shaft-drive, six-cylinder motor, long-stroke motor and sleeve valves were first seen in this country at a salon of imported cars. Among the new types of bodies shown were the convertible landaulet roadster, limited drive limousine without partitions and an eight-passenger limousine. The last named is not as massive as one would imagine and is mounted on a Mercedes fifty.

A heat retainer and radiator cover which works on the vacuum system has been invented by a Detroit engineer and it is said that it solves the perplexing problem of keeping the radiator system from freezing. It has a heat retaining receptacle on each side of the radiator and one on the front part of the cowl, which consumes the heat from the radiator when the car is running and then retains it from twelve to twenty-four hours when the car is stopped.

"Every now and then the automobile is seen and heard of serving in some other way than as a means of transportation," says Mr. Towle, of the Chicago Pneumatic Tool Company, No. 191 High street, Boston. "Frequently the gasoline motor in an automobile is seen on the street of a city sawing wood and again one sees one used to operate a grinding stone, but the latest use known for the auto is the operating of a moving picture machine, which has been adopted by L. S. Davidson, of Portland, Oregon.

Mr. Davidson purchased a Little Giant truck and with the power from the gasoline motor operates a 110-volt electric dynamo, which generates the electricity to run the motion picture machine and one are light.

SLATE WALSH FOR GOVERNOR NEXT ELECTION

For Governor—David I. Walsh of Fitchburg.

Lieutenant-Governor Walsh will head the Democratic ticket next Fall, if the plans of the party leaders are carried out. He has the endorsement of the powers that be for the party candidate for Governor to succeed Governor Foss. This was pledged him at a banquet held at the Quincy House.

Governor Foss was paid a high tribute to his running mate at the banquet. He said, speaking of the inauguration:

I. Was Walsh Day at the State House.

Lieutenant-Governor Walsh was introduced by Chairman Thomas P. Riley of the State Committee as the party's next candidate for Governor. Former Chairman John F. McDonald declared that in his mind there was no doubt but what Mr. Walsh would receive the solid support of the party.

Mayor Fitzgerald sang "Sweet Adeline," and then led in the cheering for Lieutenant-Governor Walsh.

CHICAGO COURT HEARS ARGUMENT IN DYNAMITE CASE

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Arguments on a motion to admit to bail under a writ of supervisedeus five of the thirty-three men convicted in Indianapolis of a dynamite conspiracy and sentenced to federal prison at Leavenworth was begun today before the United States circuit court of appeals. Judge Francis E. Baker, William H. Seaman and Christian C. Kohlsaat heard the argument.

The motion was presented by Attorney E. N. Zoline of Chicago in behalf of Frank Ryan, president of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers and four other officers of the union. United States District Attorney Charles W. Miller of Indianapolis resisted the motion.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—No bidders appeared at the auction of the property of Jiddon C. Sherman at Lake Geneva, on which Jack Johnson, negro fighter, holds an option. Although he would make no statement to that effect, it was generally believed that he had made over Johnson to buy the property if he so desired.

RENA GREENWOOD, CLASS PRESIDENT, LEADER IN HUNT

Jackson College Sophomore Girls Win Flag Hunt

It was only bright sunshine, despite the rain, for the Jackson College sophomore girls at College Hill, Medford, today, for they won the annual flag hunt, the first of the contests between the two lower classes. Today the sophomores were wearing the freshman flags upside down as aprons. According to the rules, the freshman flags must be done up in a bundle and hidden in recitation, reception or locker rooms of one of four buildings. They must not be buried, nor be put under lock and key.

Under the adept sleuthing of Miss Rena M. Greenwood of Medford, president, and Miss Dorothy P. Houghton of North Andover, marshal, the sophomore girls found the flags under the porch of Richardson Hall. The sophomore-freshman track meet and basketball games come next. The class winning the majority of the three events has the right to fly its flags.

NEW HAVEN CLERKS VOTE FOR STRIKE

An almost unanimous vote is being cast by the New Haven Railroad clerks in favor of insisting upon their demands for an increase of wages and a fifteen-day annual vacation. Thus far out of 1,000 men heard from, less than fifty have voted against a strike. All told, about 3,000 votes will be cast.

It was also learned from New Haven, where the clerks' system board is in conference with officials of the road on the desired wage raise and working condition betterments, that some progress, but no much of a definite nature has been made at the conferences being held.

A complete tabulation of the strike vote will be, it is said, submitted to the road's officials by International Vice-President J. J. Forrester, who is at New Haven, so that the officials may be fully informed of the temper of the men.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE NEUTRAL ON RAILROAD PROBLEM, SAYS STORROW

In an extended interview today on the transportation situation James J. Storrow, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, says that the chamber has a right to New England railroads and the people, and is partisan.

Mr. Storrow declares that the chamber, of which he is head, is ready to work for the benefit of the railroad question alone if called upon to do so, without an axe to grind.

He says the chamber is ready to help the New Haven road, and that the experience of other railroads has proved its independent position, and says as long as it does so the war seemed to be already for the interest of New England.

Here is what Mr. Storrow says:

By JAMES J. STORROW.

I have been asked, as president of the Chamber of Commerce, to express my views on the Chamber's attitude at this time toward the railroad situation. Had I cared to do so, the question of the Chamber's most important activities could not be expressed by resolution of the Board of Directors and it would, therefore, be left to me officially to make public the official opinion of the Chamber, which before becoming the official opinion of the Chamber must be voted upon by the members for approval, disapproval or rejection.

I am glad, however, to explain in a general way the attitude of the Chamber as I understand it, towards New England's transportation problems and especially towards the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, now so much the subject of discussion.

We are well aware that New England's greatest but little in the way of raw materials. We are dependent for our prosperity upon the transportation by sea or by land to our New England factories of our coal, and cotton, and wool, and leather, and iron and other raw materials, and then after New England brains and hands and capital have worked up these materials we are dependent upon the transportation of the manufactured goods to their destination, before we can obtain a reward for our labor.

Hears Many Complaints.

Now, my election as president of the Chamber more than three years ago, and the experience of other officers and directors has long led me to know some apparently hard cases of New England manufacturers and merchants, complaining of what they believed to be the prejudicial service rendered by the New Haven Railroad, or some of its connected companies. Of course what we hear of only represents a few cases out of the thousands of instances in which transportation service is rendered to the entire satisfaction of the shippers and receivers of freight.

On the other hand, we have also heard many complaints against other railroads, and we have been told by other equally intelligent men that the transportation service rendered by the New Haven Railroad and its connecting lines was entirely satisfactory.

New Haven Given Great Power.

The officers and directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce know that the New Haven system has been given great power and responsibility by the New England States. I suppose we all must agree upon the proposition that the greatest abuse to be submitted and practically satisfactory transportation service is the other hand, we know that, as most men required by the action of fair play at the expense of rendering this service of adequate reasonable compensation for rendering the service.

It seems to me that any man or any body of men, whether individuals or property of New England's leading commercial organization taking an interest in the question so vital to New England as the railroad situation, would be recognized as a friend of the railroad or railroads in question, and not as an enemy. For instance, Commissioner Prouty is trying to get at the facts.

Actions speak louder than words, and therefore I want to say a few words of what the chamber has actually done. The three illustrations show plainly that the Chamber regards the New England railroads and the people of New England as in partnership. They further show that the Chamber is ready to work for the benefit of the railroad interests of New England (as they are affected by the laws), though, on the other hand, if the railroad question is taken up for discussion by the Chamber, it would work in regard to the law, then the Chamber feels that it is in duty bound to object.

Freight Discrimination Removed.

Early in 1909, soon after the creation of the Chamber of Commerce had been completed, it was discovered that the New Haven was maintaining the same rates of freight rates from New York to Chicago via Newport, Vermont and the Canadian Pacific Railroad, although the rate from Boston and Northern New England was five cents better than the same rate from New York. Shippers in Boston and Northern New England had to pay five cents more than shippers in New York. The Boston Chamber of Commerce protested to the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington and the result of the case was that the Commission not only granted a hearing but ordered the Boston rate reduced to the New York rate. The Boston Chamber of Commerce was represented at the hearing by Joseph Eastman, Boston counsel of the Chamber, and Mr. Eastman's argument was so convincing that the Commission rendered its decision in favor of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Before setting down the facts in regard to the Chamber's attitude in the New Haven case, I think it will be well to state briefly the facts as to the organization of the Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber of Commerce was organized in 1885 by a group of Boston merchants, who felt that the commercial interests of Boston were suffering from the lack of a commercial organization which would look after the interests of the city as a whole. The Chamber of Commerce has grown from a membership of 300 in 1885 to 2,500 in 1912. It has been the policy of the Chamber of Commerce to keep out of politics, and to refrain from taking any action on any matter which was not of general interest to the business community. The Chamber of Commerce has been very successful in its efforts to do away with the political influence in the Port of Boston, and in keeping the administration of the harbor entirely in the hands of Boston. I am not saying that the Chamber of Commerce has been successful in all of its efforts, but it has been successful in many of them, and it

My Life in Prison — By Donald Lowrie

A True Story of 4 Years in Jail

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1912, by Mitchell Kennerley.

SOME one had taken the little bunch of violets from the top of the coffin before it was lowered, and after the grave was filled laid it on top.

Sydney Lanier says a violet is God.

And then, even as we stood there, wailing the signal to march back, the gravediggers placed the white board at the head of the grave—just a white board with a black number painted on it—the dead man's prison number.

The chaplain had referred to Charlie Bryce as a criminal. What was he a criminal? He was sentenced to imprisonment for life because he killed another man during a heated altercation and after the other man had attacked him. For one moment of anger he had paid with his life, yet every characteristic of the man clearly demonstrated that he was a normal being, kind to his fellows and peaceable. There are many such men whom the unthinking regard as "criminals."

During the first eighteen months of my imprisonment I bathed in—drank from—provisions of bathing was a shed, open on all sides, in which there was a primitive shower arrangement running down the centre. Two afternoons each week the water—warm salt water—was turned on and those who desired to do so were excused from work for twenty minutes to take a bath. That I—we—had no complaint about it, and a surprisingly small number of men took advantage of it, especially during the winter, the cause of which was dense, or foggy.

Sometimes there would be a compact, treaty some day during the week, when a bath might have been taken in the open air without a great deal of discomfort but Wednesdays and Saturdays were the regular days, and it made no difference whether it were rainy or windy or cold, they were the only days that the water was turned on.

A great many of the men did not bathe at all during the Winter months, and no record was kept to show whether a prisoner bathed or not. Of course, I caught a severe cold which I was unable to cure, and which came close to developing into pneumonia once or twice. But during the entire eighteen months that I worked in the jute mill I never missed a day at my task, though there were several occasions when I worked all day while suffering from the effects of fever.

And there were times when I did not dare take a bath for two, even three weeks. Going out from the warm mill and undressing outdoors, with no protection from the cold wind blowing off the foggy bay, was an ordeal, even when one was healthy, but to one suffering from cold, or with fever, it was positive torture.

Saturday is the day of events at San Quentin. The rule is that the men must be passed into the jute mill yard on that day as soon as they have completed their tasks and cleaned the machinery.

There are signs posted all over the mill warning the men not to clean machinery while running, but in spite of punishment, if they are caught at it, a great many stages of consumption, and coughed almost continuously.

His relatives learned of his condition and succeeded in getting him paroled. They came after him in an automobile. It was the first automobile that had ever been seen inside the prison walls, and was an object of great interest to the lifers and other men who had been in prison for years. I was convalescent at the time and watched the crowd that crashed their necks from the yard to see the machine. I believe that Jim died and reposed on the back seat beside his weeping sister. He died in San Francisco about a week later.

While we were walking up and down together on this particular afternoon we saw a "fish" coming across the garden from the office. The Chinaman who had him in charge took him to the matrons' room, and then up onto one of the tiers to show him his cell. The new rabbit, Smoky "sized up" the new arrival critically as he went by.

Presently the Chinaman reappeared, followed by the new prisoner. They stopped quite close to us and the Chinaman gave the final instructions.

It has always remained a mystery to me why they had a Chinaman as guide for new prisoners. He was trying to tell the new arrival that he must be at his cell promptly when the lock-up bell rang, under penalty of spending the night in Iae "hole" if he failed to be there for the count.

As the Chinaman walked away Smoky and I approached the new man, or rather I should say the new boy, for the first thing I noticed was that he had not been saved in the prison barber shop. There was no need; his face was like a woman's and his upper lip had the same downy growth as may be seen on nearly any woman's face if you observe from the right angle. His eyes were big and limpid, but without expression.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE STREET, Jan. 3.—Stock prices were not so well sustained in markets in this country and abroad this morning, there being a disposition to take profits. Easier money rates have not caused any great expansion in trading as yet. In Boston there has been a general marking down of call rates from 7 and 8 to 6 per cent. The stock market is making no drafts upon banking resources, in fact, and speculation continues dormant.

The Boston market had a fairly firm tone at the start, but the first hour tendency was downward. Calumet & Hecla declined 10 points. There were fractional losses for Butte & Superior, American Zinc, Amalgamated, Pond Creek, East Butte and others. Few issues made gains.

The New York market was not so active during the first hour as it was yesterday. There was little public interest shown in stocks anywhere.

New York Opens Lower.

At the start in New York the market was fractionally lower and tacked the support it received most of the time yesterday. There was no particular reason for the change unless it was profit taking in London, where sentiment was somewhat less cheerful.

In New York a break of 4¼ points in Western Maryland was the feature of the opening. After starting at 39, or 3½ points under Thursday's closing, Western Maryland showed a decline until at the end of fifteen minutes the net loss was 4¼. American Beet Sugar was also quite weak but active stock. Although this issue opened unchanged it immediately began to fall and its first sale took totalled 3 points.

Canadian Pacific was lower on cabled selling orders. Its decline was 1¾. Most of the stocks were off, although a few unimportant fractional gains were made. Among the early declines, in addition to those mentioned, were American Smelting, 1; Pressed Steel Car, ½; Westinghouse E. & M., ½; Steel common, ⅝; U. S. Rubber, 1½; Great Northern preferred, ¾; Chino Copper, ¾; and Baltimore & Ohio, ½.

American Can advanced ¾, while a fraction of ¼ was scored in American Locomotive. The best gain was made by Texas Company, which improved ¾. California Petroleum and American Telephone & Telegraph issues were unchanged on first sales.

The Curb was irregular.

Americans and Canadian Pacific were off in London on profit taking.

Copper Metal News.

The London copper metal market was dull at the opening, with spot down 10s. and futures off 11s. 6d.

The most recent copper sales have been limited in quantity, but one report says that sellers got 17⅝ cents a pound for all sold. Producers expect a great demand for metal from consumers within a short time. They think the movement will start in this country and as soon as buying is general in America that Europeans will rush into the market too. Regarding the prevailing price it is also stated that there is still a small quantity of spot electrolytic available at 17⅝ cents a pound.

The December output of the Shannon mine was 1,200,000 pounds, a decrease of 76,000, as compared with November.

Phelps, Dodge & Co. production in December amounted to 13,988,224 pounds of copper, compared with 12,888,937 in November.

Quincy production for the last month of 1912 was 1,325 tons of mineral, compared with 1,236 in November. The year's production was 14,891 tons.

The total of Mohawk's 1912 production was 15,762,500 pounds compared with 15,757,250 in 1911. The December last output was 1,432,000.

Wolverine output last year totalled 11,732,700 pounds, compared with 12,148,000 in 1911, 12,555,000 in 1910 and 12,992,300 in 1909. The December last output was 942,000 pounds, compared with 1,000,000 pounds in November.

Financial News in Brief.

It is estimated that after peace has finally been agreed upon that Turkey and the Balkan allies will try to make flotations through Paris which will total $200,000,000. The money will be used to pay war debts. Besides this financing that looks to be in China, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Norway, Sweden and Argentina will total about $200,000,000.

The Bank of Germany's weekly statement gives the increase in the amount of gold on hand as more than 776,000,000 marks.

The New York Central system's gross revenues for November increased $3,187,000, or 14.3 per cent. The net increase of road's gross for that month increased $1,115,000, or a gain of 14.2 per cent.

The United States Steel Corporation, it is announced, will build a $20,000,000 plant in Canada. A giant there would not be affected by any dissolution decree from the United States Supreme Court or any imperially or tariff reductions by the United States Congress.

Selling of United Cigar Stores common on the New York Curb yesterday was due to disappointment because the initial dividend and extra distribution were not larger.

Those who expected an increase in U. S. Rubber dividends at this time and did not have their hopes realized think that rate may be raised at the April meeting of the directorate. The quarterly dividends declared are 2 per cent on preferred, 1½ per cent. on second preferred and 1 per cent. on common stock.

Heavy buying of our orders placed by the Illinois Central for 1913 delivery amount to about $10,000,000.

The Governor's Message

He Is Brave and Sound on Senatorial and Railroad Situation. He Errs on Panama Canal.

The inaugural of Governor Foss is the proof that he keeps the faith. This is the beginning of the Governor's third and last term in the highest office of the Commonwealth.

The spirit and the letter of this message fulfil the utmost promises of his campaign speeches. He has kept the word of promise to the ear and to the hope of his most enthusiastic friends.

Those men who have supported him through three years of abuse must be profoundly satisfied now to see their opinion of him vindicated by the acid test. When the Governor proved faithful to his campaign pledges in the last two messages, his enemies declared that he was not expressing his personal convictions, but was seeking public applause. In an American Commonwealth the desire to ascertain and to carry out the popular will ought not to be considered a fault. But there are still many citizens who cannot understand the principle of a government by the people, and who yet believe that it is a virtue in a public servant to oppose his personal opinions against the public opinion.

For two years this class of citizens have been privately denouncing Governor Foss as an insincere man, courting public applause to promote his political ambition. But this year afforded the test. This year the Governor has measured up even to THEIR standard of political virtue. They cannot now accuse him of consulting his political ambition in the policies he avows, when he now has no longer any political object which he can seek, unless it is the name of being one of Massachusetts' best Governors.

The message deals with two critical situations. The one is our pending Senatorial election. The other, our baleful railroad monopoly. On each question the Governor delivers the word of a statesman and a Democrat.

He urges the Legislature to at once pass a law which will enable the people of Massachusetts to select for themselves the United States Senator who must be elected during this session of the Legislature to succeed Senator Crane.

It will be strange if the Governor's recommendation is not heeded by the Legislature. Massachusetts has already enrolled itself in that column of States which has endorsed the amendment to the National Constitution, which takes the election of the United States Senators out of the hands of the Legislatures of the States and places it directly in the hands of the people themselves.

Long before the term of the Senator about to be elected shall have expired, the people of every State of the Union will be electing their own United States Senators.

The Governor deals with the New Haven Railroad monopoly in a spirit that ought to make those who had faith in him proud, and those who had not, quite abashed.

He recommends that the Boston Railroad Holding Company, the device by which the New Haven Railroad now controls the Boston & Maine, be abolished. He recommends that the States of New England each take a share in the management of the Boston & Maine Railroad by placing their representatives on the board of directors.

It will be noticed that the Governor agrees with Mr. Hearst's views concerning the solution of our railroad monopoly evil.

Mr. Hearst, a few days ago, in a signed article in the AMERICAN, declared that the way out of this bad situation was by restoration of competition, or by public control of the railroads. Both men agree that regulation is not now sufficient. It must be internal and not outside control; not the sort of precaution that locks the barn door after the horse is stolen, but locks it before the marauder can enter. Public regulation from the outside by a commission can never be ENTIRELY sufficient. By the time its necessarily slow and cumbersome processes have overtaken some harmful practices by the private managers of a railroad, and forbidden it, the private managers have reaped a good profit from it, and are ready to do the same thing in a different way. By the time the public regulators have wrenched one hand of the railroad out of one public pocket, another hand is in another pocket. That Governor Foss and Mr. Hearst, observing conditions independently, should reach the same conclusions, is not remarkable. Men of affairs can hardly escape the conclusion that when every device for making a railroad serve the public has failed, then public participation in its management is necessary.

The excellence of the Governor's message was slightly marred by the foolish suggestion that we ought to allow foreign ships to enjoy the Panama Canal without contributing anything toward the stupendous expense of that work. It is unbelievable that the Governor could have considered what this proposition involves. This canal was paid for out of taxes levied upon the American people. Our American shipping paid its part of its tremendous cost. Therefore, every American ship which passes through that canal will have paid its toll in taxes. Then, shall the foreign ship pay nothing?

The high-sounding but ill-considered and absurd proposal was probably projected into the Governor's mind through the jingle of its words in his ear. But it is unimportant, because the suggestion is beyond his province and will not be heeded. It will not prevent the people of Massachusetts from saying of the Governor's message:

"WELL DONE, THOU GOOD AND FAITHFUL SERVANT."

Practical America Is a Land of Dreams, Not Fully Appreciated by Americans.

Idealism Has Led the World Forward, and on This Continent Has Appeared in Its Most Resplendent Form.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

WE Americans know that we are a great people. We are conscious of our power and of our capacity for growth. We feel the leaping blood of youth in our veins, and, like all youth, we desire and expect admiration. Whenever a thoughtful European comes to our shores we ask him what he thinks of us, and we anticipate, and usually get, an answer that flatters our vanity. But generally he gives us very little information about his real thoughts, while we have no idea of the amazing problems that we suggest to his mind.

Professor Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian and thinker, is more outspoken than the majority of our visitors, and, not deeming it worth his while, or our while, to flatter a giant whose size and strength are manifest and indisputable, he proceeds to tell us frankly the impressions that we make upon a critical but friendly and deeply thoughtful observer brought up amid the traditions of the old world, imbued with the spirit of inquiry and guided by the results of profound historical and sociological research.

The consequence is that the series of articles that Professor Ferrero is writing in HEARST'S MAGAZINE possess an intensity of interest for all reflective Americans which can hardly be overstated.

Foreign Visitors See Us Far Differently Than We Do Ourselves

The question that we are always so eager to put to distinguished visitors, "How does America strike you?" he answers in an entirely new way, which enables us to see ourselves as we should probably do if we could cast off our Americanism and look at this country, its people, its institutions and its ideals, with the eyes and the mind of a foreigner.

He is not like Goldsmith's Chinese philosopher in England, continually picking at little faults in the manners and customs of his hosts, but he takes a broad view, as well as a penetrating view, of the American people as a whole, and tells freely of the astonishing problems that our swift progress, our bold innovations and our daring faith in ourselves and our ambitions awaken in him.

It is the dissection of a people and of the mind of a people in many respects the most wonderful that the world has produced that this Italian thinker has set himself to perform, and the revelations of his scalpel are immensely interesting, whether we accept them as scientifically conclusive or not.

In the January number of the HEARST MAGAZINE Professor Ferrero makes the startling suggestion that both we and the world at large have been altogether mistaken in thinking that our distinguishing characteristic is practicality. No, he says (in substance), these people who have made, and are making, the United States are the world's chief dreamers. They are idealists, and it is the Europeans who, by comparison, are the practical people. "With a frequency unheard of in Europe they (the Americans) will set out to slay the innumerable dragons of life, without any certainty of success, but with the inspiration of a mystic faith that all things must somehow turn out right in the end."

And yet, with all our disposition to dream dreams, we are so practical that Professor Ferrero is driven back to the old charge that our civilization is machine-made.

Our Undeveloped Wealth Has Given Us Machine Civilization

But he puts it in a more philosophical form. It is, we are told, the immense natural wealth of our continent, lying undeveloped, that has given us a machine civilization, almost as a matter of necessity. What is made by machinery is made rapidly and in vast quantity. Machines increase the output and also the consumption. The cry is always for more goods and more customers. In a civilization where the machine dominates, says Professor Ferrero, men force themselves to live in a hurry, producing and consuming rapidly. They prefer to consume many pieces of flimsy stuff to one that is durable and of great perfection. The machine, in short, sets up the ideal of quantity against that of quality.

But how, then, can the people who do these things with an energy that is the marvel of the world be called essentially idealists and dreamers? It is, we are told, in substance, because the American, consciously or unconsciously, holds before his mind the optimistic idea that he can with his machines subdue nature, straighten her out, and, by sheer force of brain and will, master his continent from ocean to ocean.

We Welcome Immigrants as We Make Use of Their Energies

He disregards the difficulties and obstacles that daunt the European, welcomes the inpouring of hordes of foreigners whose physical energies he can apply to the accomplishment of his purposes, and, with sublime and unquestioning faith, looks continually to the end, sacrificing himself and fearlessly running all risks for its attainment.

There is, no doubt, a great deal of truth in these speculations, and they are worth thinking over. It will be a new thought to many Americans that we are the representative dreamers of this practical age, but when we look at our achievements we have no cause to be ashamed of our dreams.
